PREFACE.

In the text of this edition the MSS, have been followed rather than the emendations of editors, unless there seemed to be weighty reasons to the contrary. In places, however, where A is certainly corrupt, the testimony of Donatus or other Scholiasts as to readings earlier than those in the Calliopian MSS, has been sometimes accepted, when supported by intrinsic probability. In all but a few cases the limits of space have precluded a full statement of the arguments for and against doubtful readings, but in no instance has a decision been made without careful consideration of all sides of the question.

In a School edition it has been thought better to print the letter v, and to adopt the modernised spelling of the MSS., except where the orthography in Terence's time was demonstrably different: e.g. o is substituted for u after another u or v; quor, quoius, quoi, etc., appear for cur, cuius, cui, etc., and -is for -cs in the accusative plural of such words of the third declension as form the genitive plural in -ium.

As regards the spelling of verbs or adjectives compounded with prepositions no rigid uniformity has been observed, because none existed in the republican period. Assimilation took place in the commoner words, and in certain combinations of letters (e.g. m and p), much earlier than in others. Accordingly conraditur is read, but comparatum (40-1), and so on. In this respect the text follows that of Fleckeisen.

This Play, like its three predecessors in the same series, has been carefully expurgated for use in Schools.

It is hoped that the stage directions, which have been mainly suggested by practical experience at Westminster, may be of real service.

Constant use has been made of the editions of Umpfenbach, Fleckeisen, Dziatzko, Wagner, Bond and Walpole,—the first two on textual questions only,—with less frequent reference to those of Bentley, Zeune (containing the commentaries of Donatus), Stallbaum, Parry, and Davies. References are made to Roby's School Latin Grammar as more likely to be generally accessible than his larger work.

I have to thank my former fellow-worker, C. E. Freeman, Esq., of Park House School, Southborough, to whose accurate scholarship our editions of the Trinummus and Andria owed so much, for his courteous permission to make use of any matter which appeared in one of the Plays above mentioned as our joint production. I must also express my obligations to the Rev. R. F. Dale for his kindness in reading through the notes and making some valuable suggestions.

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION.

The whole work has been carefully revised, and, it is hoped, improved. Among my critics I have especially to express my obligations to my friends, the late Mr. J. H. Onions of Christ Church, and Mr. St. G. Stock of Pembroke College, Oxford, several of whose suggestions have been adopted.

INTRODUCTION.

ROMAN COMEDY AND TERENCE.

First beginnings of Dramatic Representations at Rome. The natural bent of the Roman character was too serious and too prosaic to favour the growth of a national drama. More than five hundred years had elapsed since the foundation of the city, before a play of any kind was produced on the Roman stage, and even then it was but a rude adaptation of a foreign work by a foreign author.

Fescennine Verses. Yet there had long existed the germs whence a drama might, under other circumstances, have sprung. The unrestrained merriment of the harvest-home at time of vintage found expression, in Latium as in Greece, in extemporised dialogues more or less metrical in character, and much more than less coarse in expression. The lively genius of the Greeks had from such rude beginnings developed a regular Comedy as early as the sixth century B.C. But, among the Romans, although these rustic effusions were at a very early date sufficiently well established to receive a definite name, Carmina Fescennina, from Fescennia, a town in Etruria; yet they never rose above gross personalities and outrageous scurrility. When this license was checked by a stringent clause in

Fescennina per hune inventa licentia morem Versibus alternis opprobria rustica fudit, Libertasque recurrentes accepta per annos Lusit amabiliter, donce iam saevus apertam the Laws of the Twelve Tables, the Fescennine verses became merely a generic name for improvised songs, not always very refined, at weddings, triumphs, or other festal occasions.

Saturae. According to Livy 7. 2, the first 'ludi scenici' were introduced at Rome 361 B.C. to appease the anger of the gods who had sent a pestilence on the city.

It seems certain that about this time a stage was erected in the Circus at the Ludi Maximi, and the first three days of the festival were henceforth occupied with recitations, music and dancing. Performers from Etruria, called ludiones, danced to the music of the flute without words or descriptive action; but the strolling minstrels of Latium (grassatores, spatiatores) soon took advantage of the stage to recite their chants with appropriate music and gesture. These performances were named from their miscellaneous character Saturae 1. They were composed in the rugged Saturnian metre, with no connected plot, and did not admit of dialogue.

Fabulae Atellanae. A nearer approach to dramatic form was made in the Fabulae Atellanae, broad farces with stock characters, e.g. Maccus, Pappus, Bucco, and Dossenus, analogous to the clown, pantaloon, and harlequin of an English pantomime. Each character had its traditional mask, and the pieces were originally played only by amateurs at private theatricals; but when translations from Greek dramas had monopolised the Roman stage, the Atellan farce was adopted as an after-piece, like the Satyric drama among the Greeks, and was regularly performed by professional actors. The name Atellanae, from Atella, an Oscan town near Capua, gave rise to the erroneous supposition that these farces were performed at Rome in the Oscan dialect; whereas it was only in accordance with Roman custom to give to dramatic performances a local name which could offend no national prejudices. The records of these plays are scanty, but they appear to have presented extravagant caricatures of special classes, trades, or occurrences, and their grotesque situations and lively humour secured them a lasting place in popular favour.

Laws regulating Dramatic Performances. The failure of the Romans to produce a national drama was due, not only to their national 'gravity,' but also to the rigid censorship of the laws. Any personal lampoon, any ill-advised criticism of public affairs, met with summary chastisement. 'Fuste feritor' was the laconic edict of the Twelve Tables: and the magistrates seem to have had plenary power to scourge any actor at any time or place that they deemed fit.

Public opinion at Rome. To legal harshness was added a moral stigma. No Roman citizen could venture to appear on a public stage without losing his character for ever. The composition and performance of plays were handed over entirely to freedmen and slaves, who did not dare to represent Roman life, or introduce Roman topics. Even the rustic raillery and amateur farces of early Rome had to lay their scene in Tuscan Fescennia or Oscan Atella.

Contact with Greek civilisation. Moreover, in addition to a national deficiency of literary instinct and ignominious legal penalties, a third cause had operated powerfully in checking any development of dramatic originality. For nearly five centuries the Romans had been engaged in a varying, yet almost ceaseless struggle for supremacy, or even for existence. The defeat of Pyrrhus, 274 B.C., and the final conquest of Tarentum and the other cities of Magna Graecia a few years later, left them undisputed masters of the whole peninsula. They were thus brought into close contact with Greek civilisation at the very moment when they had leisure to attend to it. There began at once to arise an ever-increasing demand for a better education for the Roman youth, and for more varied amusements for the Roman populace. The satisfaction of these demands was delayed by the First Punic War, 264-241 B.C.

Livius Andronicus. In 240 B.C. Livius Andronicus, a Tarentine captive who received his freedom for educating the sons of Livius Salinator, produced on the Roman stage ¹ a drama translated from the Greek. He also translated the Odyssey into Saturnian verse as an educational text-book, which was still in use in the boyhood of Horace ². Thus at Rome the beginnings both of Epic and Dramatic poetry were due not so much to poetical inspiration as to the needs of the school-room and the Circus. As might be expected in work thus done to order, there was little artistic merit. The few fragments which remain seem crude and barbarous, and we may well believe that the books were never again opened when the rod of an Orbilius was no longer dreaded.

Old Athenian Comedy. There could be no doubt as to the school of Attic Comedy to be chosen for imitation. The Old Comedy of Eupolis, Cratinus or Aristophanes, essentially political in its subjects, abounding in topical allusions and trenchant satire of public men and public matters, could not have been reproduced on a Roman stage.

Middle Comedy. Even the poets of the Middle Comedy, who satirised classes rather than individuals or travestied schools of philosophy, would have seemed to the stern censors of the Republic far too free, and would have been almost unintelligible to the majority of Romans.

New Comedy. The New Comedy was alone available. This was the name given to a school of dramatists, of whom the best known are Philemon, Diphilus, Apollodorus of Carystus, and above all Menander. They wrote at a period (340-260 B.C.) when the power of Macedon had crushed the liberty of Greece. Political life was dead; social life was idle and corrupt. The natural products of such a period of decay were the 'Society' plays of the New Comedy. Their aim was merely to give amusing sketches of every-day life1. The savage satire of Aristophanes only survived in good-humoured banter. keen strife of Conservatism against Democracy was replaced by intrigues of amorous youths or crafty slaves to outwit the head of the family. The interest of these plays was not local but cosmopolitan. Human nature is pretty much the same in all ages, and so these plays were naturally suited for the Roman stage. They were amusing, without the slightest tendency to criticise points of national interest, or otherwise offend against the strict regulations of the Roman magistrates.

Cn. Naevius, who flourished 235-204 B.C., the first imitator of Livius Andronicus, a Campanian of great ability and force of character, did indeed dare to write with something of Aristophanic freedom. But his temerity in assailing the haughty Metelli, and even the mighty Africanus himself, led first to imprisonment and afterwards to banishment. The experiment was not repeated.

Plautus and Terence. Between 230 and 160 B.C. the writers of Comedy were fairly numerous², but only two have bequeathed to posterity more than scattered fragments. These two are Titus Maccius Plautus and Publius Terentius Afer.

Life and Works of Terence. Plautus died in 184 B.C. Terence was born in 195 B.C. at Carthage, whence his cognomen 'Afer.' He was a slave, but must early have shown signs of ability, for his master, Terentius Lucanus, gave him a good education, and before long his freedom. His talents gained him admission to the literary clique, known as the Scipionic circle, the fashionable representatives of the new Hellenic culture. Scipio Aemilianus was the centre of the coterie, which included Laelius, L. Furius Philus, Sulpicius Gallus, O. Fabius Labeo, M. Popillius, the philosopher Panaetius, and the historian Polybius. These being men of education and taste, unreservedly recognised the immeasurable superiority of Greek literature as compared with the rude efforts of their native writers. To present to a Roman audience a faithful reproduction of the best Hellenic models, in pure and polished Latin. seemed to them the ideal of literary excellence. Style was more valued than strength, correctness of form more than originality of thought. Such was the literary atmosphere which Terence breathed; and his enemies, not confining themselves to gross aspersions on his moral character, openly affirmed that the plays produced under his name were really the work of his distinguished patrons. How far Scipio or Laelius may have had some hand in his plays can never be known; Terence at any rate did not care to refute the report which doubtless flattered his noble friends, but rather prided himself on the intimacy and approbation of so select a circle 1. All the plays of Terence, as of Plautus, were Comoediae palliatae, i.e. plays wherein the scene and characters are Greek, as opposed to Comoediae togatae, where the scene is laid in Rome or at least in Italy. National tragedies and dramas were called Fabulae Praetextae.

Terence's first comedy, the Andria, was produced 166 B.C. Suetonius relates that when this play was offered to the Aediles, the young author was told to submit it to the judgment of Caecilius. Terence arrived when the veteran poet was at supper, and being in mean attire was seated on a stool near the table. But he had read no more than a few lines, when Caecilius bade him take a place upon his couch, and bestowed high commendation on the play. As Caecilius died in 168 B.C., the Andria must have been in manuscript at least two years before its performance, and some colour is given to the above anecdote by the mention which Terence makes in the Prologue of the illnatured criticisms of Luscius Lanuvinus. The Hecyra, his second play, proved his least successful one. At its first performance in 165 B.C., the audience deserted the theatre to look at some boxers; a similar fate attended a second representation in 160 B.C., and only the personal intercession of the manager, Ambivius Turpio, secured it a hearing at all. The Heauton Timorumenos appeared in 163, the Eunuchus and Phormio in 161, the Adelphi in 160. In the same year Terence visited Greece, either to study for himself Athenian manners and customs, or, as some assert, to escape the persecution of his enemies. According to one account 1 he perished by shipwreck in 150 B.C., as he was returning to Italy with no less than 108 of Menander's comedies translated into Latin. A more general belief was that he died at Stymphalus, in Arcadia, from grief on hearing of the loss of his MSS., which he had sent on before him by sea. Porcius Licinus narrates that his noble patrons suffered him to die in such abject poverty that he had not even a lodging at Rome whither a slave might have brought news of his death. This is probably untrue, for Suetonius writes that he left gardens of twenty jugera in extent on the Appian Way, and his daughter afterwards married a Roman knight.

In personal appearance Terence is said to have been of middle height, with a slight figure and reddish-brown hair. Of his character we know nothing, save what can be gathered from his prologues. These indicate a lack of independence and confidence. He evidently feels that he is not a popular poet. He never professes to be more than an adapter from Greek models; imitation, not creation, was the object of his art.

Contrast of Plautus and Terence. The sensitive protegé of patrician patrons has none of the vigorous personality of Plautus. Indeed, though the literary activity of the two poets is only separated by a single generation, their works belong to different epochs of literature. Plautus wrote for the people, he aimed at the broad effect on the stage, his fun was natural and not unfrequently boisterous. Circumstances forced him to adapt foreign plays and lay his scenes in foreign cities, but he was not careful to disguise his true nationality, and freely introduced Roman names, allusions, and customs wherever they might contribute to the dramatic effect on the heterogeneous audience which crowded to the gratuitous entertainments of a Roman holiday.

Between such plays and the polished productions of Terence there is a world of difference. Terence sought the approbation, not of the uncultured masses, but of a select circle of literary men. His highest aim was to produce in the purest Latin a perfect representation of the comedies of Menander and his school. His cardinal virtues, as a writer, were correctness of language and consistency of character. His scene is always laid at Athens, and very rarely in his six plays can be found an allusion which is distinctively Roman. Indeed, the whole tone of his writings was cosmopolitan. Human nature, under the somewhat common-place conditions of every-day life in a civilised community, was his subject; Homo sum, humani nihil a me alienum puto, was his motto. His plays breathe a spirit of broad-minded liberality, and their simple unaffected style, the easy yet pointed dialogue, the terse and dramatic descriptions, and the admirable delicacy of the portrayal of character, won from the cultured taste of the Augustan age a more favourable verdict than could have been expected from the rude and unlettered masses who most enjoyed the broad fun of a boisterous farce. The above characteristics secured for Terence considerable attention at the Renaissance in Europe. In England several of the minor dramatists are under obligations to him; while in France his influence profoundly affected Molière, and is in no small degree responsible for the long-continued servitude of the French drama to the 'unities' of time and place which have so cramped its free development.

As might be expected, the characters in Terence, though admirably drawn, are rather commonplace. No personality in his plays stands out in the memory like that of Tyndarus in the Captivi, or Stasimus in the Trinummus. Two old men, one irascible and the other mild, both usually the dupes of their sons and an intriguing slave; two young men, one of strong character and the other weak, both amorous and somewhat unscrupulous as to the means of gratifying their passion; a dignified and elderly gentleman; an anxious mother; a devoted servant; a rascally slave dealer: these form the stock characters of Terentian comedy and recur with somewhat wearisome monotony. Nor does the standard of morality rise above a conventional Terentio non similem dices quempiam.

Cicero writes:

Tu quoque, qui solus lecto sermone, Terenti, Conversum expressumque Latina voce Menandrum In medium nobis sedatis vocibus effers, Quidquid come loquens atque omnia dulcia dicens.

Horace, Ep. 2. 1. 59, records the general verdict:

dicitur . . .

Vincere Caecilius gravitate, Terentius arte.

Volcatius, on the other hand, places Terence below Naevius, Plautus, Caecilius, Licinius, and Atilius.

respectability and a civilised consideration for others, except where the natural impulses inspire a generous disposition with something of nobility.

The discerning criticism of Caesar nearly expresses the more matured judgment of modern times:

Tu quoque, tu in summis, O dimidiate Menander, Poneris et merito, puri sermonis amator.

Lenibus atque utinam scriptis adiuncta foret vis Comica, ut aequato virtus polleret honore

Cum Graecis neque in hac despectus parte iaceres;

Unum hoc maceror ac doleo tibi deesse, Terenti.

Not that Terence was devoid of humour; but his humour is so delicate and refined that it must often have fallen flat upon the stage. When his plays are well known their subtle satire and polished wit can be appreciated; but there is without doubt an absence of energy and action (Caesar's vis comica), which prevented his pieces from being dramatically successful. An audience must be educated up to his plays before it can perceive their many excellences.

THE PLOT AND CHARACTERS OF THE PHORMIO.

The scene of this play is, as usual, laid at Athens. characters of the two old men, so familiar to readers of Terentian comedy, are represented by the brothers Demipho and Chremes, Athenian citizens of good position and some fortune. former has a son named Antipho; the latter is husband to Nausistrata, of whom he stands in considerable awe, and father of Phaedria. Nausistrata has inherited from her father property in the island of Lemnos, whither Chremes goes year by year to collect the rents and realise the produce of the farms. While on one of these visits he clandestinely marries, under the feigned name of Stilpho, a Lemnian lady, and has by her a daughter named Phanium, born sixteen years before the opening scene of the play. This family is supported out of the income derived from the property of Nausistrata, who imagines that it is only one example of Chremes' general incapacity that he brings home so much less money than the estate formerly yielded.

Demipho is aware of this unlawful connexion, and has moreover agreed to marry his son Antipho to Phanium, passing her off as a distant relation of the family.

The play opens at a time when Demipho and Chremes are both absent from Athens, the former in Cilicia on a visit to an old friend who promised him a most profitable investment, the latter on a journey to Lemnos, whence he intends to bring Phanium for the projected marriage with Antipho. Upon his arrival, however, he finds that both mother and daughter have left the island in search of him. They arrive safely, but being unable to discover any one in Athens named Stilpho, are reduced to great poverty and distress. Overcome by her anxieties the mother falls ill and dies, leaving Phanium in charge of a trusty old nurse, Sophrona.

During this period the two young men Antipho and Phaedria are left at Athens in charge of Demipho's confidential slave

Act I. In the opening scenes Geta narrates his experiences to his friend Davus. Finding it impossible to control a pair of wild youths, he gives up the attempt, and lets them follow their own devices.

Phaedria first falls violently in love with a music-girl named Pamphila, who is in the hands of a slave-dealer, Dorio, on sale for thirty minae (£120). As Phaedria has no money, he can do nothing but escort his lady-love to and from the school where she is completing her education.

Just at this time Antipho is told a touching story of a beauty in distress at a funeral. He goes to see, and it proves to be none other than Phanium weeping over her mother's corpse.

The young man is at once captivated by her charms, but dares not marry a penniless girl in his father's absence. In his perplexity he lays the case before Phormio, a shrewd parasite, from whom the play is named. Phormio takes up the matter with zest. He has often been entertained at Antipho's house, and has moreover a natural turn for intrigue. Pretending to be a kinsman of Phanium, he trumps up a fictitious story that Antipho is her nearest relation and so by Athenian law under obligation to marry her. Antipho is summoned before the courts, of course makes no attempt to rebut Phormio's evidence, and so is bound over to marry Phanium, which he does forthwith. His happiness is, however, soon clouded by the dread of his father's wrath, and he pours forth his troubles (Sc. 3) into the unsympathetic ears of his cousin, who considers that he himself is alone deserving of pity. Geta now (Sc. 4) brings the news of Demipho's arrival. Antipho cannot be induced to face his father, and runs away, leaving Phaedria and Geta to fight his battles for him.

Both do their best to calm down the irascible old gentleman, who comes on (Sc. 5) fuming at the news of his son's unauthorised marriage. In spite of all that can be said, Act I closes with his determination to seek legal advice and fight the matter out with Phormio.

Act II introduces us to Phormio, who confidently assures Geta that he will make everything all right, and gives a lively picture of a parasite's easy life. The conversation is interrupted by the appearance of Demipho (Sc. 2) with three advisers. Phormio at once assumes a high hand. He defies Demipho to interfere with a judgment formally given in a court of law, and threatens to sue him for heavy damages if he ventures to turn Phanium, as he threatens, out of doors. Demipho is furious, but cannot outface the parasite. Each of his three friends gives a different opinion, and he is left in a state of greater perplexity than before. Finally he decides to await his brother's return, and goes off to make enquiries at the Peiraeus.

Thereupon Antipho reappears (Sc. 4) and learns from Geta what has occurred. They are quickly joined by Phaedria and Dorio. The slave-dealer has had an offer for the music-girl, and with cynical brutality repudiates his engagement to give Phaedria some time longer to procure the necessary money. The young lover is in the depths of despair, but is somewhat cheered by Geta's promise to raise the thirty minae by hook or by crook.

Act III. In the interval between Acts II and III Chremes has returned. Demipho is explaining to him the position of affairs when Geta appears, prepared to carry out a scheme concocted between himself and Phormio to obtain from the old men the money required by Phaedria. He tells the two fathers that zealous for their interests he has sounded Phormio as to what he would take to get Phanium safely out of the way by marrying her himself. Phormio alleges that he is engaged to another girl, but, as a great favour to Demipho, will throw over his fiancée on payment of the sum of thirty minae as dowry for Phanium.

Demipho is furious at this extravagant demand; but Chremes, anxious to get his Lemnian daughter married to Antipho and so avoid the awkward questions which might be asked by a stranger, agrees to provide the money from his wife's income. All this has been overheard by Antipho in the background. He is nearly beside himself with anger at what he supposes to be Geta's treachery, and grief at the prospect of being compelled to divorce his young wife. He is only very partially reassured by Geta's explanations, and goes off to tell Phaedria of the scheme and its success as Demipho and Chremes reappear with the money. Geta conducts Demipho to settle matters with Phormio. Chremes, left alone, is considering how he can find out his wife and daughter from Lemnos, when, to his utter amazement, Sophrona, their faithful servant, comes out of Demipho's house. His bewilderment is intensified on hearing that the mother is dead and the daughter married to Antipho. At first he thinks that, in unconscious imitation of his uncle, the young man has married two wives, but when at length he realises that Phormio's ward is one and the same as his own daughter, his joy and thankfulness know no bounds, and he at once goes into his brother's house to see the bride.

In Act IV we find Demipho returning with Geta from his business with Phormio. He fetches Nausistrata from her house, as Chremes had requested that she should be asked to break the news to Phanium with reference to her projected match with Phormio. But as they approach the door out comes Chremes full of excitement at the unlooked-for turn which events have taken. An amusing scene follows. Chremes tries to stop Demipho from taking further action, but cannot give any intelligible reason in Nausistrata's presence. He finally manages to get his wife dismissed, and takes Demipho into the house to communicate his great piece of news. As soon as they have disappeared Antipho enters, quickly followed by Phormio, in high spirits at having secured the money for Phaedria who has lost no time in having his Pamphila formally set at liberty. Geta bursts out of the house upon them, beside himself with excitement. By an adroit piece of eavesdropping he has learnt the secret about Phanium, the importance of which is fully grasped by Phormio, who retires to prepare for the next stage of his intrigue.

Act V opens with a stormy scene between Phormio and the two old gentlemen. The parasite demands Phanium as his bride in accordance with the compact. Demipho says that he has changed his mind and insists that the thirty minae should be refunded. Phormio indignantly refuses, and roundly reviles them both for their childish indecision. Demipho, losing all patience, tries to hurry Phormio off to the law-courts, whereupon the parasite plays his trump card. He openly proclaims his knowledge of Chremes' Lemnian family, and threatens to tell all to Nausistrata. This brings matters to a climax. Demipho and Chremes endeavour to drag Phormio away from the house and a violent struggle ensues, which is ended by the appearance of Nausistrata, summoned by the parasite's stentorian lungs. Chremes, to his utter confusion, has to hear the story of his misdeeds poured into the ears of his injured wife. Nausistrata is wildly indignant, Phormio insolently triumphant. He invites the public to Chremes' 'funeral obsequies,' and further tells of Phaedria's marriage and of the trick by which the purchase money was secured. At this news Chremes begins to fume, but is at once set down with the crushing retort from his imperious spouse that his son might well have one wife, if the father had two. Demipho's mediation at last effects a provisional reconciliation. As a reward for his services, and as a punishment to Chremes, Phormio obtains from Nausistrata an invitation to dinner, of which he will no doubt constantly avail himself, and they all go into the house as the curtain falls.

The story of the Play will have already indicated the main outlines of the several characters. In naming the Play after Phormio, Terence showed a just appreciation of the importance of the part. The individuality of the parasite is strongly marked. Shrewd and unscrupulous as to means, avowedly a 'bird of prey' who lives on the weakness or the vice of his neighbours, he yet displays an active sympathy and bon-homie in his dealings with the young men, which redeem his rascality from utter baseness. He may be a rogue, but he is no hypocrite, like Chremes.

Antipho and Phaedria are rather common-place, and, unlike Aeschinus and Ctesipho in the Adelphi, are very similar in character. Both are frank and affectionate, but entirely wanting in mental ballast or moral principle, the slaves of their passions and mere puppets in the hands of Phormio, or even of the servant Geta.

On the other hand, the personality of the two old gentlemen is sharply drawn and skilfully worked out. Demipho is an irascible miser, with a domineering disposition which ill brooks contradiction, and a love of money which made him ready to expose his brother to public shame rather than submit to the loss of thirty minae.

Chremes is a life-like portrait of a weak and hen-pecked husband. He has no more principle than his son with much less honesty, and richly deserves the unenviable position in which we leave him.

Nausistrata is a strong-minded shrew, who despised and persecuted her feeble husband, but she seems to have been liberal enough in advancing a large sum to Demipho, nor does she grudge it to Phaedria when she learns the truth. The violence of her temper affords the only extenuation for the infidelity of Chremes, and brings dramatic retribution on her own head.

Of the other characters little need be said. Dorio enjoys the unenviable reputation of being the most repulsive and rascally slave-dealer in Roman Comedy: Geta is faithlessly faithful in helping the young men to cheat his master: Sophrona has the usual characteristic of old nurses depicted by Terence, devoted attachment to her mistress: the 'advocates' are concisely, though unintentionally, humorous.

Artistically considered the Phormio occupies a middle place among the comedies of Terence. In it we find nothing so farcical as the 'baby-scene' in the Andria, nor has it the exquisite polish and pervading moral purpose of the Adelphi. But the dialogue is more pointed and the interest better sustained than in the earlier play, while what is lost in finish is gained in vigour when compared with the later. Molière has made the Phormio the basis of a farce, Les Fourberies de Scapin, but no impartial critic would prefer the copy to the original.

METRES AND PROSODY.

The object of this Introduction is to explain briefly the metres employed by Terence in the Phormio, and to clear up such apparent difficulties of Prosody as may remain after the general scheme of the metres is understood.

These metres are Iambic and Trochaic, which receive their names from being composed of iambi or trochees, as the case may be, or of some other feet, considered to be equivalent; and the lines are further subdivided according to the number of metres which they contain, and according to their complete or incomplete form. In iambic and trochaic lines a series of two feet is called a metre (or dipodia), and the name of the line corresponds to the number of these metres; thus an iambic trimeter is an iambic line containing three metres or six feet; a trochaic tetrameter is a trochaic line containing four metres or eight feet. Again, some lines have a number of complete feet: these are called acatalectic: while others are called catalectic, because the last foot is incomplete. Thus a trochaic tetrameter catalectic is a trochaic line of four metres or eight feet, wanting the last syllable, and really containing only seven feet and a half.

I. IAMBIC.

(a) Iambic Trimeter Acatalectic, or Senarius: (6201); all the plays of Terence begin with it.

- (b) Iambic Tetrameter Acatalectic, called Octonarius from its eight complete feet. (116.)
- (c) Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic, called Septenarius from its seven complete feet. (57.)
 - (d) Iambic Dimeter Acatalectic, or Quaternarius. (3.)

These lines consist in their pure form of iambi; but the spondee, tribrach, anapaest, and dactyl are admitted in all feet except the last, which must be an iambus, unless, of course, the verse is catalectic. Moreover, as the Tetrameter is Asynartete, i.e. regarded as being composed of two verses, with the division after the fourth foot, that foot is usually an iambus; and such words as ego, tibi, cedo, are allowed to stand there as if at the end of a senarius. In any iambic metre an anapaest is occasionally resolved into a Proceleusmatic (a anapaest is most commonly in the first foot, and composed of two distinct pairs of syllables. Cf. 48, 133, 276, 370, 394, 707, 733, 762, 768, 776, 795, 966, 968, 983, 999.

II. TROCHAIC.

- (a) Trochaic Tetrameter Acatalectic, or Octonarius. (19.)
- (b) Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic, or Septenarius. (237.)
- (c) Trochaic Dimeter Catalectic. (2.)

These lines consist in their pure form of trochees; the spondee, tribrach, anapaest, and dactyl are also admitted. But only the trochee, tribrach, and sometimes dactyl are found in the seventh foot of the Septenarius. In Trochaic Septenarii the last syllable is always considered as long: cf. 318, 319, 321. Trochaic, like Iambic Tetrameters, are considered to be divided after the fourth foot, but in neither metre is this division constantly observed. As the Trochaic metre is more quick and lively than the Iambic, it is naturally employed in scenes where strong feeling and excitement are represented.

Besides the above, 485 is an irregular line, apparently consisting of one trochee with a syllable over.

PROSODY.

The rules of prosody, as commonly taught, must be considerably modified, if we are to understand the scansion of Plautus and Terence. It must always be remembered that the poets of the late days of the Republic and their successors were writing in a literary dialect, not in the language of everyday life. The quantity of any syllable was regarded as rigidly fixed, just as we might find it marked in a dictionary. But in reading the comic poets we find that accent must be considered as well as quantity. Scansion was determined by the ear, not by any hard and fast rules. Just as in Shakesperian verse loved may be scanned as of one syllable or of two, and the same word may be pronounced as long or short according to its position, so in Terence eius, huius, quoius, etc., may be monosyllabic or dissyllabic, and the same syllable may be used with a different quantity according to the requirements of the metre. This latter variation of quantity is however not arbitrary, but conforms to a general law, which may be thus stated.

When the metrical accent 1 falls on the first syllable of an Iambus, or on the syllable before or after an Iambus, the second syllable of the Iambus may be shortened.

Accordingly in Iambic metre,

$$(a) - \checkmark - = - \checkmark \circ, \qquad (b) \circ - \checkmark = \circ \circ \checkmark :$$ in Trochaic metre,

It will be noted that in the following examples some of the shortened syllables would by the ordinary rules be long by nature, others long by position; and that the 'lambic Law' applies equally to a combination made up of more than one word.

(a) 10 actóris opera mágis stetísse.

787 factúm volo: ác pol mínŭs queo virĭ cúlja, quám me dignum est. (Here virĭ illustrates b.)

922 argéntum rúrsum iúbě rescríbi, Phórmio.

Other examples are 800 córdi quíd istuc, 972 quin nóvő.

(b) 143 vel ŏcciditó.

261 dari mi in conspéctum.

266 hic in nóxia est, ille ad défendéndam causam adést.

434 seněctútem obléctet.

439 dicám tibi inpíngam grándem.

806 neque intéllegés.

902 verěbáminí.

The following are in Proceleusmatics:

370 ob hănc inimicitias.

707 anguis per inpluvium décidit.

This form of shortening, i.e. where the accent falls on the syllable after the iambus, is by far the most frequent, and is very common in the first foot. Examples are too numerous to quote at length.

(c) 529 nam híc me huiús modi scibat ésse.

546 séd parumne ést quod.

557 quántum opus ést tibi ărgénti.

739 cónloguár. quis hic lóquitur.

(d) 209 quid hic contérimus operam.

516 idem hic tibi quod bont proméritus.

564 scío ěsse exánimatám metu.

Other examples are 737 mágis cognósco, 852 séd isne est.

(e) 342 prior bibás, prior decúmbas.

563 númquid ěst quód operá mea vóbis ópĭs sit. Níl, verum ábǐ domum. (Here ěst illustrates c, and opĭs illustrates d.)

The so-called 'Iambic Law' may be thus accounted for. Latin pronunciation threw the accent on the penultimate of dissyllables. In the case of longer words the accent fell on the penultimate, if that syllable were long, on the antepenultimate, if the penultimate were short: e.g. sénex, regébat, réxerit. Special stress on one syllable tends to diminish the length of its neighbours. Accordingly there was a natural tendency to shorten the final syllable of an Iambus, and to obscure or drop final consonants: and this tendency was greatly strengthened when the metrical ictus coincided with the word-accent. When however the two did not coincide the verse-accent prevailed over the word-accent. This is most frequently exemplified in anapaestic feet of an Iambic line, when the metrical ictus on the third syllable of a bacchius $\smile--'$ changes it to an anapaest $\smile--'$.

Conversely the ictus sometimes makes long a syllable which would otherwise have been short.

The final consonants most frequently disregarded are ${}^{1}m$,—hence its elision even in Augustan poetry before a vowel or h,—which is often omitted in inscriptions: ${}^{2}s$, as constantly in Lucretius and the older poets, especially when u precedes; and to a lesser extent d, l, n, r, t. Terence often avails himself of this licence, e.g. 660 incerties sum at the end of a senarius.

Similarly opus est, factus est, etc., may always be scanned opu'st, factu'st when convenient, e.g. 715, 833, etc. So also amatus es may metrically be amatu's. It was doubtless too in accordance with ordinary pronunciation that Terence sometimes scans nempe as něpě, e. g. 307 němpe Phórmiónem. Note also that mihi and nihil are usually considered as monosyllabic, whether they are written as mi and nil or not: but cf. 176, 940. It seems probable that visum est, noxia est, etc., were pronounced visum'st, noxia'st, and the accents have been placed accordingly.

² Cic. Or. 161. Quod iam subrusticum videtur, olim autem politius, eorum verborum, quorum cacdem erant postremae duae litterae quae sunt in 'optumus,' postremam litteram detrahebant, nisi vocalis insequebatur. Ita non crat ea offensio in versibus quam nunc fugiunt poetae novi. Ita enim loquebamur 'qui est omnibu' princeps,' non 'omnibus princeps,' et 'vita illa dignu' locoque,' non 'dignus.'

Besides the 'Iambic Law' and the points above mentioned, there are other causes of difference between Terentian and Augustan prosody.

- I. Indifference to double consonants, which Terence probably did not write. Thus ille is often used as a pyrrhic (oo), and less frequently esse, eccum, quippe, immo, etc.; possibly also such cases as supellectile 666, occidito 143, etc., may be thus accounted for. Cf. Lucr. 6. 1135 coruptum = corruptum.
- II. Retention of the quantity of final syllables originally long. This is very rare in Terence. Of the nineteen instances quoted by Wagner in his Terence, Introd., p. 14, only two are certain, viz. Phor. 9 stetit, Ad. 25 augeāt. These instances confirm the opinion that -it of perf. ind. and -at of pres. subj. were originally long, while there is more doubt with reference to the same terminations in other tenses. In 315 $d\bar{t}s$ is doubtful. In the older poets, Ennius and Plautus (cf. Ritschl, Prol. 175), such long syllables are common, especially -or (- $\omega \rho$) in nouns, adjectives, or verbs, -at, -et, -it in third pers. sing. of verbs.

Lucretius seldom permits himself this licence. Mr. Munro admits only two instances of $-\bar{e}t$ (though this termination is always long in Ennius), while $-\bar{a}t$ and $-\bar{i}t$ never appear except as contracted forms for -avit, -iit. Vergil freely lengthens -or, -er, -ur, us, -at (imperf.), -et, -it, but only in arsis, and usually when a pause follows the word. Note, however, that Vergil does not confine himself to syllables originally long, but admits such quantities as $sup\bar{e}r$, $pu\bar{e}r$, $cap\bar{u}t$, $proc\bar{u}t$, and frequently $-qu\bar{e}$ in imitation of the Homeric $\tau\epsilon$ before double consonants. Ovid regularly lengthens $peri\bar{e}t$, $sub\bar{e}t$, $red\bar{e}t$, etc. Horace lengthens syllables in arsis about ten times.

III. Synizesis or Synaeresis. Almost any two vowels not separated by a consonant may be contracted into a single syllable. This is most common in the case of pronouns and deus, e. g. eum, twom, meorum, hwws, cwws, deos; but we also find revere 18, nescro 193, dwitius 182, dwas 754, dehortatus = dortatus 910, qwoad 148, etc. Sometimes a word made monosyllabic by synizesis is then elided, e. g. meum 232. In Terence dehinc and proin are always of one syllable, antehac of two. On the contrary, nunc iam is always scanned as nwnciam, and is printed accordingly (diaeresis). Augustan poets employ Synizesis sparingly, chiefly in making consonantal i or u, as abiete, ariete = abjete, arjete; tenuia = tenvia, and in cases of nouns or adjectives ending in -eus, e.g. aurea.

IV. Hiatus is admitted.

- (1) when there is a change of speaker, e.g. 146, 542, 963;
- (2) when the line is broken by a strong pause, e.g. Ad. 574;
- (3) after an interjection, e.g. 411, 753, 803.

Note that O seems to form one syllable with the following vowel by a kind of Synaeresis in 259, 360, 853. Occasionally a long final vowel, or a vowel before m, is shortened and not elided in the case of a monosyllable, e.g. qut aget 27, nt agas 419, tt tdem 426 probably, quăm ego 808, st habet 1041. Cf. 383, 501, 883, 911, 954, 982, 1005. Lucretius has eleven instances of this (see Munro's note on 2. 404), Vergil six, e.g. Ecl. 8. 108 an qut amant. Cf. Madv., 502 b.

ACCIDENCE AND SYNTAX OF THE PHORMIO.

- (β) of Infinitive clause, 113;
- (γ) of subject of Infinitive, 233.

Besides these differences in Accidence and Syntax the plays of Terence abound, as is natural, with words or phrases used in a colloquial sense, cf. 47, 54, 79, 82, 133, 145, etc., among which may be specially mentioned proverbial sayings, cf. 78, 186, 203, 318, 419, 506, 686, 768, 780.

Tautologous and pleonastic phrases are also a characteristic of comic diction, cf. 80, 89, 164, etc.

Greek words, though not nearly so frequent as in Plautus, occur oftener than in Augustan writers, e.g. dicam 127, asymbolum 339, eu 398, gynaeceum 862, logi 493, paedagogus 144, palaestra 484, parasitus 28.

It should however be borne in mind that most of the above points are characteristic not so much of Terence individually as of the conversational language in vogue at that period; and when writers of the Ciceronian or Augustan age descend from the artificial style then affected in literary composition—as for example Cicero in his Letters—many of these so-called peculiarities reappear.

CODICES OF TERENCE.

The MSS. of Terence fall into two classes. Class I is before the recension of Calliopius, Class II after it. Class II consists of two groups, as bracketed below.

The Bembine is by far the most important, not merely on account of its antiquity, but because it alone has escaped the recension of Calliopius in the seventh century. Codex A was in bad condition, as its owner Cardinal Bembo testified, before the end of the fifteenth century. Andria 1–786 is now entirely wanting, and of Adelphi 914–997 only a few letters are legible.

It bears a note written by Politian (1493 A.D.) to the effect that he never saw so old a Codex. The hands of two correctors can be discerned: one of ancient date, which only appears twice in the Andria, and never in the Phormio or Adelphi; the other 1, about the fifteenth century, which changed and added characters in a 'downright shameless fashion.' But, where not thus tampered with, Codex A possesses an authority sufficient to outweigh all the other MSS. taken together, though the scribe was not a very careful one, and not unfrequently made palpable mistakes in copying. The later MSS. were so much altered by the Calliopian recension that their independent authority is not very great. In all MSS., even in A, the spelling has been much modernised.

The evidence of the MSS. is to some extent supplemented by quotations of ancient writers, and the commentaries of grammarians.

Of these latter, the most important is Aelius Donatus, tutor of St. Jerome, about 350 A.D., and the author of a celebrated grammatical treatise which became the common text-book of mediaeval schools. Priscian (480? A.D.), Servius (about 420 A.D.) in his notes on Vergil, and other more obscure scholiasts are of occasional service.

 $^{^1}$ N.B.—The readings of the late corrector of Δ are indicated in the notes by $A_2.$

NOTES.

Didascalia. The notices called διδασκαλίαι, concerning the origin and first performance of Plautine and Terentian comedies, were inserted after the titles in the MSS., probably by grammarians of the Augustan age.

Phormio. The reason of the title is given Prol. 26-8.

Ludi Romani or Ludi Circenses were celebrated in honour of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva (Cic. Verr. 2. 5. 14), September 4th-19th. At first irregular, and lasting but one day, they became annual, Mommsen thinks, about 367 B.C., and extended to fifteen days by 44 B.C., a sixteenth being added in honour of J. Caesar after his death. The entertainments included a procession, chariot-races, displays of horsemanship, boxers, dancers, comedies, etc.

Aedilibus Curulibus. These magistrates had official superintendence of the public games, and often spent vast sums upon them to gain popularity with a view to their canvass for the consulship.

egere, 'brought out.'

L. Ambivius Turpio was the manager who produced all Terence's plays See p. 15. Ciccro de Senect. 14. 48 mentions him as a good actor. With him is associated in all the Didascaliae, except that of the Hecyra, L. Atilius of Praeneste, of whom nothing further is known.

modos fecit...tota. 'The music by Flaccus, slave of Claudius, on treble and bass flutes throughout.' According to Servius tibiae inpares = tibiae Phrygiae, i.e. two of unequal size and stops: tibiae pares = tibiae Sarranae, i.e. two of equal size and stops. Tibiae are also called dextrae and sinistrae. Probably t. dextrae were treble, t. sinistrae bass, so that t. inpares would be one of each. The Heauton Timorumenos was 'primum tibiis inparibus, deinde duabus dextris,' as opposed to 'tibiis inparibus tota,' the change of the music corresponding to the merrier character which the play assumed. Donatus, however, says that t. dextra = bass, and sinistra = treble.

Claudi, sc. Servos, who composed the music for all Terence's plays.

Graeca, i.e. Comoedia Palliata, wherein the scene and characters are Greek, as opposed to a Comoedia Togata, in which they are Roman, or at any rate Italian. See Introduction, p. 15.

Apollodoru. This archaic form, representing the Greek gen. sing. in -ov, is retained in the Didascaliae; cf. Adelphoe = 'Αδελφοί. Apollodorus of Carystus in Euboca, a writer of New Comedy (see p. 13), also composed the original of the Hecyra. He is said to have written forty-seven comedies and gained the prize five times, but some confusion exists between him and another comic poet, Apollodorus of Gela.

Epidicazomenos (Mid. voice), i.e. 'one who claims a girl in marriage as next of kin.' Donatus says that the real title was 'Επιδικαζομένη (Pass. voice), from the girl claimed, and that the 'Επιδικαζόμενοs was a different play; but this seems improbable, as we should naturally expect ή 'Επιδικασθείσα, not ἐπιδικαζομένη. Cf. 125 note.

facta IIII, 'produced fourth in order,' i.e. of Terence's comedies; the abortive attempt to represent the Hecyra being apparently not reckoned. See p. 15.

Cos. or Coss., the usual abbreviation for Consulibus. The date was 161 B.C. See p. 15.

Prologue.

It had been the custom of earlier dramatists to give a plot of the Play in the Prologue. As dramatic art developed this was felt to be unnecessary, and Terence only followed the example set by Plautus in the Trinummus (if the Prologue of that play be authentic), in making the various characters of the comedy unfold its story to the audience. It was, however, an innovation either to write no Prologue at all—as at the first representation of the Hecyra, and possibly of the Andria—or to make the Prologue a vehicle for answering personal criticisms and attacking critics. The Prologues of the six plays of Terence are all genuine, while the twelve extant Prologues of Plautus are all spurious, with the possible exception of that to the Trinummus.

1. postquam, as in Ad. 1, almost = quoniam (quom iam), the fact being that the ideas of sequence in time and of causality fade imperceptibly into each other.

poeta vetus, i.e. Luscius Lanuvinus, his jealous rival, to whom Terence refers in all his prologues, except that of the Hecyra—in Heaut. 22 with the epithet malevolus. Cf. p. 15.

poetam. Terence never introduces his own name, as Plautus sometimes does, but calls himself poetam, hunc, or hominem.

Note the alliteration, which however Terence does not use so freely as Plautus, except in his prologues; cf. 4, 8, 11, 14, 17, 18, 22, 23, 29. Jordan calculates that an alliteration occurs in about every nine lines of Plautus and twenty lines of Terence. Cf. 334.

2. studio, sc scribendi.

 dictitat, note the frequentative, 'is always saying.' antehao, always scanned as two syllables in Terence. 5. Translate, 'that the plays... are poor in execution and commonplace in style.' oratio is the manner in which the plot (argumentum) is worked out. scriptura is either (a) 'the style of the composition' = stilus, here and Andr. 12; or (β) 'the work composed;' cf. Hec. Prol. 2. 13 ne cum poeta scriptura evanesceret; ib. 24; Ad. I.

levi, opposed to gravi, 'stately.'

6. adulescentulum, more correct than adolescentulum.

7. cervam fugere etc. depend on adulescentulum videre. In Terence video is often followed by an Inf. with Acc. expressed or understood; sometimes by a Participle. as is the rule with Augustan writers. Cf. 177. We know nothing of the passage here alluded to, but we gather that the style of Lanuvinus was somewhat sensational and melodramatic. Insane delusions have often been represented on the stage, notably in the Ajax of Sophocles.

9. intellegeret, more correct than intelligeret.

quom, always so spelt in Plautus and Terence. Latin writers till the end of the republican period avoided u after u or v. The correct form in classical Latin is cum.

stetīt, 'succeeded;' stare was technically used of a play in this sense. This is one of the very few instances in which Terence retains the archaic long quantity of a final syllable. Cf. Ad. 25 augeāt industriam. Cf. p. 30.

10. Actoris, possibly Ambivius Turpio. Lanuvinus might have retorted that this was true of the Hecyra.

13. lacessisset = lacessivisset. Syncope is more common in Terence than in Augustan Latin. Cf. 198 note.

14. prologum, in spite of πρόλογος; cf. platča and πλατεία, crepidam and κρηπίδα, propinare and προπίνειν.

16. in medio etc., 'is for open competition among all.' Cf. ἐν μέσφ κείται. For the opposite e medio see 967, 1019.

17. artem musicam = Gr. μουσικήν, which includes all literary, scientific, and artistic pursuits, opposed to γυμναστική. Translate, 'who cultivate dramatic art.'

18. ab studio studuit. The juxtaposition of two words of the same root is common in Terence. This is merely a special form of Assenance, and is to be distinguished from Agnominatio or Paronomasia, which, strictly speaking, is a play upon words of similar sound but different sense, something akin to a pun, e.g. Andr. 218 inceptio est amentium haud amantium. Paronomasia is fairly common in Plautus, but rare in Terence. The term is sometimes extended to a play upon different meanings of the same word, such as is not uncommon in Cicero, e.g. ius Verrinum. Cf. Dem. de Cor. 13.

reicere, contracted form of rejicere; cf. 717, Verg. E. 3. 96 reice capellas, Hor. Sat. 2. 3. 283 surpite = surripite. Tr. 'to reduce to beggary.'

19. hic. Cf. I note.

20. audisset bene, 'he would have been well spoken of;' audire bene or male is often used thus, e.g. 359. Cf. καλώς οτ κακώς ἀκούειν.

21. rellatum = red-latum by assimilation. Lucretius uses both rel-latus and relatus; cf. 86 redducere, 646. Translate, 'Let him consider that he has been paid back in his own coin.'

22. dicundi. This was the archaic spelling of the Gerund and Gerundive. At the period of Terence the forms in -undus and -endus were used side by side for verbs of the third or fourth conjugation, except that -undus is never admitted where the verb-stem ends in u or v. The older form was much affected by Sallust, and is frequently used by Augustan writers, especially in legal or political phrases, e.g. iure dicundo, res repetundae, being most common in verbs of the fourth conjugation, ire and its compounds always retaining the form in -undus, while gerundus and ferundus are usually found in Cicero, Caesar, and Livy. This form is seldom used, as here (and 50), for the Gerund.

23. quom, 'although.' In Plautus often, in Terence occasionally, quom causal or concessive is followed by the Indicative. Cicero regularly uses this construction after such verbs as laudo, gaudeo, doleo, gratulor, and, if the reading be correct, in Off. 1. 44. 157 atque ut apum examina non fingendorum favorum causa congregantur, sed, cum congregabilia natura sunt, fingunt favos; sic homines... Cf. 208, 967. In this case it is easily seen how the idea of coincidence in time passes into that of 'although.' Roby, § 733.

Some editors place a note of interrogation after facit, but there is a good sense without a question. 'I will now say no more about him, though he on his side does yet more offend.'

de se is inserted to answer to de illo, emphasising the unprovoked character of the attack. The sense here given to de is unusual.

24. novam, sc. new to the Roman stage.

25. Epidicazomenon. Cf. note on Didascalia.

26. Latini etc., 'its Latin title is Phormio.' Bentley's emendation was Graece, Latine.

27. primas partis qui aget, 'the leading character,' Gr. πρωταγωνιστήs.

Phormio, from $\phi o \rho \mu \dot{\phi} s$, a mat, indicating the grovelling character of a parasite.

partis. The Acc. plural of such nouns of the third declension as form the Gen. plural in -ium was generally written -eis or -is. But from an early period, as inscriptions prove, there was considerable variety of usage. In the last century of the Republic the tendency seems to have been to write -es in common words, -is in others.

28. parasitus ($\pi a \rho \dot{a} - \sigma i \tau \sigma s$), lit. 'a companion at table.' The term soon acquired an invidious meaning, 'a needy hanger-on,' such as were admitted to the houses of the wealthy on condition of making themselves useful and agreeable by telling stories or singing songs for the amusement of the guests.

res, 'the action of the play.'

29. voluntas vostra, 'your good will.'

30. date operam, 'give us your attention.' Cf. 62 note.

per silentium, 'in silence' or 'silently;' cf. per ludum, 'in sport,' per vim, 'forcibly,' per tumultum, 'uproariously,' etc.

32. quom per tumultum etc. 'When our troupe was driven off the stage with uproar' (Gr. $\xi \xi \epsilon \pi \epsilon \sigma \epsilon$), referring to the first attempt to produce the Hecyra (see p. 15). Ambivius Turpio says in his Prologue Hec. 33-6

Quom primum eam agere coepi, fugilum gloria, Funambuli eodem accessit expectatio, Comitum conventus, strepitus, clamor mulierum Fecere ut ante tempus exirem foras.

Appeals for good behaviour were very necessary in the case of the miscellaneous throng which composed the audience in a Roman theatre, as in the Poenulus of Plautus, where nurses are requested not to bring in babies, 'ne et ifsae sitiant, et pueri pereant fame; neve esurientes hic quasi haedi obvagiant.'

grex, 'the troupe;' dux gregis, 'the manager,' who was also the chief actor, in this case Turpio, and so called in v. 33 actor.

33. This line probably refers to the successful performances of the Heauton Timorumenos and Eunuchus, as the Hecyra was not accepted by the public till 160 B.C. the year after the performance of this play.

34. aequanimitas, 'your kind attention;' cf. Ad. 24.

ACT I. SCENE 1.

Davus is a character introduced merely to assist in the explanation of the plot to the audience, in Greek $\pi\rho\delta\sigma\omega\pi\sigma\nu$ $\pi\rho\sigma\tau\alpha\tau\iota\kappa\delta\nu$. He appears, purse in hand, to repay a loan to Geta, the confidential slave of Demipho.

35. summus, 'intimate.'

popularis, 'fellow-countryman.' If Davus = Dacus, it is likely enough that Terence might have considered him a fellow-countryman of Geta, as both Daci and Getae were tribes living on the banks of the Danube. At Rome slaves were often named thus after their nationality; e.g. Syrus. Popularis may, however, merely = 'fellow-slave,' according to the custom, not yet obselete, of slaves to identify themselves with their masters.

36-7. erat ei etc. 'I had a triffing balance of money on a little account for some time due to him.'

rělieŭom. This word is always of four syllables in Lucretius and the older writers. Lucretius scans rēlieŭos. Catullus, Tibullus, Vergıl, and Horace, unwilling either to lengthen the first syllable or to unite the two last, avoid the word altogether. Later it is used as a trisyllable, e. g. by Juvenal, rěliquus. Note the diminutives.

38. id ut conficerem, sc. oravit, curious Ellipse. Translate, 'could I settle it?' In colloquial language the principal verb is often omitted.

Cf. 65, 80, 142, 144, 198, etc.

39. erilem filium = eri filium, a common phrase in Terence. Cf. 128 note. Such words as erus, umerus, umor were never spelt with an h until after the Augustan period.

40. credo, parenthetical, as often in the comic writers.

41. quam inique comparatum est, 'what an unfair arrangement it is'

ii, so A, no MS. reading ci or i, which is commonly printed in deference to Ritschl on Pl. Trin. 17 (Prolegomena, p. 98). Priscian says that ii was pronounced as i, and probably was sometimes so written.

43. unclatim, 'ounce by ounce.' The $uncia = \frac{1}{12}$ of the as or libra, which was originally a pound weight of copper. Adverbs in -tim were probably old Accusative cases.

demenso, 'rations,' 'short commons,' which were served out to slaves, an allowance proverbially scanty: sometimes called diaria (dies), as being the daily portion, e. g. Hor. Ep. 1. 14. 40. Cf. ἀρμαλιή, Hes. Op. 765.

44. genium, 'his own self,' (from root GEN- in gigno). 'The Romans believed that every man had a genius, though their notions on the subject seem very confused. According to the name it should be the attendant on a man's birth, as it was believed to be the inseparable companion of his life. It represented his spiritual identity, and the character of the genius was the character of the man.' Mr. Macleane's note on Hor. Ep. 1. 7. 94. Cf. Hor. Od. 3. 17. 14 Cras genium mero Curabis, ib. Ep. 2. 2. 187, Scit genius, natale comes qui temperat astrum, Naturae deus humanae, mortalis in unum Quodque caput, vultu mutabilis, albus et ater. Ib. 2. 1. 144, Pers. 5. 151 indulge genio, Cf. 70 note. compersit, 'has saved,' spelt comparsit in the Calliopian MSS.

45. illa, i.e. the bride.

46. partum, sub. sit, the Ellipse making the phrase more emphatic.

47. ferietur alio munere, 'will be hit again,' a colloquial phrase for losing money which has a parallel in English. Propertius 4. 5. 44 uses ferit in a similar sense. In Pl. Trin. 247 ibi pendentem ferit, there is a play upon the ordinary and the colloquial meanings.

48. natalis dies, i.e. at the ἀμφιδρόμια, or name-feast, an Attic festival, at which the child was carried round the hearth. Birthdays were scrupulously observed among the Romans also, as occasions for gifts and feasts. Note the procelcusmatic in the second foot; see Introduction on Metres, p. 26.

49. initiabunt, a word of doubtful meaning in this place.

(1) 'at his initiation,' either to the family sacra, or to the Eleusinian or other mysteries.

(2) 'at his weaning,' because according to Varro children were then initiated to the rites of the deities who presided over eating, drinking, and sleeping, Edulia (or Edusa), Potica, and Cuba.

Admission to the family sacra is on the whole more probable, because the ceremony at weaning was purely Roman and so not likely to be here alluded to. See pp. 16-7. Some editors place only a comma after dies, supposing that the 'initiation' took place on the birthday; but it is more forcible to understand it as a fourth occasion for fleecing Geta.

50. mittundi. Cf. 22 note.

ACT I. SCENE 2.

Davus is interrupted by the appearance of Geta, who is coming out to look for him. In the conversation which ensues Geta lets the audience know the position of affairs; how impossible he had found it to control the two young men, Antipho and Phaedria, of whom he had been left in charge; how Phaedria had become enamoured of a musicgirl whom he was unable to purchase from her master Dorio; how Antipho likewise had fallen a victim to the charms of a young lady named Phanium, whom he had first seen at her mother's funeral; how by Phormio's assistance a suit had been trumped up against Antipho, who was asserted to be the next-of-kin to Phanium; how, no defence being made, the marriage had been hastily concluded, with the result that all parties were now dreading the return of the young man's father Demipho.

51. rufus, 'red-haired.' Davus wore a red wig. Rujus in this sense was a cognomen of several families at Rome. The sentence is an Aposiopesis; cf. 110.

praesto est, 'he is here.' An old Nom. praestus is found in an inscription, but it is only used as an adverb elsewhere.

52. obviam conabar, sc. ire, 'I was going to look for you.'

em. In Plautus and Terence em seems to be used as another form of en, while hem is an interjection expressive of any strong emotion. The MSS, however, vary so much that often the reading cannot be certainly determined. Here A gives em, tr. 'take it, here it is;' all other MSS. hem, which is adopted in the text with a colon after accipe, because it is dramatically more forcible. Em is often followed by an Accusative, sometimes with tibi added. Cf. 210, 847, etc.

53. lectum est, 'it is of full weight,' lit. 'picked-out;' cf. Pl. Ps.

1149 Accipe: hic sunt quinque argenti lectae numeratae minae.

conveniet numerus, sc. nummorum, etc. 'You will find the amount of my debt in full:' an idiomatic use of the Fut. specially common in Horace, e.g. Od. I. 6. I, I. 7. I, etc.

54. amo te, 'I am much obliged to you.' Cf. 478. Similarly, amabo = ' if you please.'

55. adeo res redit, 'things are come to such a pass.' Cf. 317. Reflections on the depravity of the age are very frequent in the comic writers, e.g. Pl. Trin. 1028-53, Ad. 441-5, etc.

redit, probably contracted from rediit; cf. 153, 706, Munro on Lucr. 3. 1042.

57. tristis, 'out of spirits;' it often = 'out of temper' or 'morose' in Terence, e. g. Ad. 79.

58. istue, neuter of istic, istaec, istoc or istue, a form of iste strengthened by the demonstrative affix -ce, as in hic, haec, hoc, and illie, illaec, illoc or illue; cf. 77 note, 290, etc.

59. mcdo ut = dummodo; cf. 773.

abi, 'go to,' a common expletive, sometimes used in a good sense, more often threatening or contemptuous. Cf. 994.

sis = si vis, usually joined in colloquial-language with an Imperative. Cf. 103 sodes.

62. hanc operam tibi dico, 'I am all attention:' operam dicare is somewhat stronger than operam dare, cf. 30.

63. senis nostri = Demipho.

Chremem. Like some other Greek proper names this word follows more than one form of inflexion in Terence: e. g. Chremen, Chremi (gen.) And. 368, Chremes or Chreme (voc.); also Chremetem And. 472, Chremetis ib. 247, Chremeti infra 1026.

64. nostin? = novistine? The final -e of -ne is often dropped when affixed to words ending in -ti, -is, -us, -a, and the last syllable is then shortened. Cf. 194, 256, 275, etc.

quid ni? 'of course,' a conversational phrase.

quid? 'well;' used to introduce a new point in a narration or argument; frequent in this sense in Cicero. Cf. 147.

Phaedriam, sub. nostin?

65. tam quam te = tam bene eum novi quam te.

66. illi, i. e. Chremes; nostro, i. e. Demipho.

Lemnum. Lemnos became a dependency of Athens in the first Persian war and so continued until the Macedonian supremacy, a special clause in the peace of Antalcidas allowing Athens to keep Lemnos, Imbros, and Scyros.

Ciliciam. After the conquest of Alexander the Great, Greek civilisation spread to Cilicia, and Tarsus became a well-known school of philosophy.

67. antiquom, 'of old standing,' not old in years, which would have been senem. or veterem.

68. modo non, 'little short of.'

70. sic est ingenium, 'that is his way:' ingenium = the natural bent of his character or 'genius.' Cf. 44 note.

regem me esse oportuit, 'Tis I ought to have been the Croesus,' implying, I would have made a better use of my money than that. Rex was technically used for a wealthy powerful patron in relation to his clients and dependants: cf. 338, Hor. Ep. 1. 17. 20, Juv. 1. 36, etc.

71. hic (so A) with relinquont; other MSS. read hine with abcuntes.

72. provinciam etc., 'you undertook a hard commission.' Cf. Pl. Tr. 100.

73. mi usus venit, 'so I found it,' lit. 'experience came for me;' a familiar idiom, cf. Heaut. 553, 556, 557.

74. memini, 'I am sure that;' the word literally means 'to have in mind.'

deo irato meo, 'because my god was angry with me.' Every person had some special deity, under whose protection he supposed himself to be; a sort of divine 'patronus.' Cf. Pl. Poen. 2. 4 dis meis iratissumis; Verg. A. 2. 396 haud numine nostro. We might render, 'I am sure that the charge was a freak of my evil genius.'

76. scapulas perdidi, 'I made my shoulders come to grief,' i.e. I got beaten for my pains.

77. venere in mentem mi istaec; istaec can be Nom. fem. pl. or Nom. neut. pl. (cf. 58 note); if taken here as fem. the sense is, 'I thought of those shoulders of yours;' if as neut. 'I thought of what you just mentioned.' The former seems preferable.

78. advorsum stimulum calces, sc. iactare, 'it is folly to kick against the pricks;' πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε. is a Greek proverb found in Aeschylus, Pindar, and Euripides, e. g. Aesch. Ag. 1624, Eur. Bacc. 795, Acts of the Apos. 26. 14.

The text of 77-8 is according to the best MS. authority.

Some editors give the whole passage to Geta (73-79), reading 'nam quae (= quaenam) inscitia est, Advorsum stimulum calces!' as a quotation.

eis, 'for them,' dat. commodi.

79. obsequi quae vellent, 'to humour them in whatever they wished: ' quae, a kind of Cognate Acc., cf. Ad. 990.

soisti uti foro, 'you know how to work the market:' scisti= scivisti. Note the close connexion between the Present and the full Perfect; 'you have understood'='you know.' Cf. 103.

80. nil quicquam, an emphatic pleonasm, common in colloquial language Cf. 89, 630. There is an ellipse of fecit; cf. 440 note.

81. puellulam. Note the contemptuous diminutive.

82. perdite, 'to distraction;' miser is similarly used Ad. 522, etc.

83. inpurissimo, an abusive epithet, common in Terence.

84. neque...quicquam, sc. erat, 'and there was not a penny to give,' sc. for her purchase.

85. oculos pascere, cf. Verg. A. 1. 464 animum pictura pascit inani.

86. sectari. Note the frequentative, 'dance attendance on her.' The word was used of the young men who frequented the society of the famous philosophers and sophists.

in ludum ducere, 'to escort her to her school,' i.e. where she had music lessons, her value as a slave depending on her accomplishments.

redducere. The double d is confirmed by Lucretius, who lengthens the first syllable, and it appears as a correction in D and Andr. 559 in A.

88. exadvorsum ilico, 'right opposite;' ilico (in loco) is occasionally used in early Latin in its original sense of place, not as later of time. Cf. Ad. 156 nunciam ilico hic consiste; infra 195.

89. tonstrina, in most MSS. tostrina, cf. Cos. = Cons., note on Didascalia. Barbers' shops in classical, as in more recent times, were favourite resorts where the news of the day was learnt and discussed.

fere plerumque, pleonastic, cf. 80.

90. dum iret, Subjunctive of expected action, a form of Final Subj. Roby, § 692.

91. illi = illic, an archaic form often found in Plautus, sometimes in Terence, and perhaps in Vergil G. 1. 54, 251, 3. 17. Cf. 572, 772.

92. mirarier, historic Inf., a marked characteristic of Terence's style, wherein he is followed by Sallust. The archaic termination of the Inf. Pass. or Deponent in ier is not unfrequent in Terence, but only when the antepenultimate is long. Cf. 206, 305, 306, 589, 603, 632, 640, 697, 931.

93. modo, 'just now;' cf. 221. With the following vivid narrative may be compared the corresponding scene in the Audria 105 sqq.

94. visum, is attracted into the gender of the Complement onus.

95. hie vieiniae, 'hard by;' viciniae is most probably a Genitive (partitive) depending on hic; cf. Andr. 70 huc viciniae, and such phrases as adhuc locorum Pl. Capt. 382, istuc actatis Heaut. 110; it might, however, be a locative.

97. ea sita est exadvorsum, 'the corpse was laid out opposite the door,' as was the custom. sila is more commonly used of a corpse when buried.

99. miseritum est, sub. me, 'I was moved with pity.'

IoI. commorat = commoverat.

102. voltisne eamus. Volo may be followed by the simple Inf., Acc. and Inf., Subj. with or without ut, or Acc. with a Part. Pass. Cf. 432.

visere. The Inf. of Purpose is used by Terence after ire, mittere, and dare, as well as ut with Subj. or Supine in -um: very rare in Augustan writers, and only in poetry, cf. Verg. A. 1. 527 non ferro Libycos populare Penates venimus, Hor. Od. 1. 2. 7 pecus egit altos Visere montes.

103. sodes = si audes, 'if you please.' Cf. 59 sis.

vēnimus, Perf. tense, 'we arrive.' Note the vigour of the Asyndeton.

104. et quo magis diceres, 'and all the more reason for saying so is that \dots '

106. horrida, 'unkempt.' This scene is closely imitated by Molière, Les Fourberies de Scapin, Acte I, Sc. 2.

107. vis boni, 'the very essence of beauty.' Cf. δύναμις τοῦ καλοῦ.

108. inesset... extinguerent. The use of the Imperf. Subj. for the Pluperf. Subj., for the sake of greater vividness, is an idiom often found in the best authors; sometimes even a Pres. Subj. is substituted. Cf. Madvig, Lat. Gr. § 347, obs. 1-3; infra 119, 297, 299, 468, etc.

110. satis scita est, 'she is pretty enough.' Cf. Andr. 486 perscitus fuer, 'a very fine boy;' the more usual meaning being 'witty,' 'clever,' 'sensible,' e. g. 820.

For the Aposiopesis cf. 51.

111. sein quam = scisne quantum. Cf. Cic. Phil. 2. 41 vide quam te amarit.

quo evadat vide, 'see the sequel.'

112. anum, i.e. Sophrona.

recta, sc. via, 'straight.'

113. enim. Terence often uses enim or nam as a particle of emphasis; cf. 332, 338, 487, 555, 694, etc. In 983 enim in this sense begins a sentence; cf. Ad. 168, Pl. Trin. 1134. Vergil and others constantly employ the same idiom, and there is a similar use of $\gamma \acute{a}p$ in Greek, especially in $\grave{a}\lambda\lambda\grave{a}$ $\gamma \acute{a}p = sed\ enim$. Cf. 615 note.

se negat, sc. id facturam esse. Such an ellipse is common enough in colloquial language, e.g. 383, 447, 519, etc.; cf. 38, 440 notes.

117. nescire, Historic Inf., cf. 92; like the Historic Pres. it can be followed either by a primary or historic Subjunctive in dependent sentences.

119. non = nonne, as regularly in Terence and Plautus. Indeed it is doubtful whether nonne was found in the original MSS. of these writers, -ne or non being used indifferently. However all existing MSS. read nonne 768, Andr. 238, 239, Ad. 660. Cf. 260, 392, 525, 856. Non is sometimes thus used in spoken language by later writers, e.g. Cic. Cat. 1, Liv. 4. 4, etc.

veniam daret, 'would he not have given him permission;' for the tense cf. 108 note.

120. indotatam. The dowry was the first point looked to by a father who was arranging a match for his son.

122. quid fiat? The Subj. depends on rogas or some similar word understood. It is common in the indignant or excited repetition of a question asked by another; e.g. 382, 685.

123. homo confidens, 'an impudent rascal.' Confidens usually in a bad sense, but cf. Andr. 855. Note homo here, homo 411.

qui, an old form of the ablative or locative, used by Plautus and Terence in several senses:—

 as a relative, referring to any gender and either number. Cf. 655, 770, 889.

(2) as a final particle, with the Subjunctive—'in order that.' Cf. Ad. 950.

(3) as an interrogative adverb, in direct or indirect questions,— 'how,' 'why?' Cf. 130, 330, 381, 396, 398, 799, 855, 915.

In this sense it is common in Horace, Cicero, etc.

(4) as an indefinite particle with words of emphasis—'somehow,'

Gr. πώs, e. g. hercle qui, edepol qui, quippe qui, numqui, etc. Cf. Ad. 800.

(5) introducing curses, πωs, ut, 'would that,' 'O that.' Cf. the present passage, Pl. Trin. 923, 997.

perduint, archaic form of perdant (as duint for dent), used often by Plautus, thrice by Terence, twice by Cicero. Plautus also employs perduim, perduis, perduit. In Terence occur duim, duit, duint, in Plautus duim, duis or duas, duit, duint. Cf. 519, 713, 976, 1005.

125. proxumi. In older Latin superlatives were spelt -umus not -imus. Julius Caesar is said to have introduced -imus. By a law of Solon if a citizen died leaving his estate to a daughter in default of male issue, provided no special arrangement had been made in the father's will, her next of kin (ἀγχιστεύs) was bound to marry her, or to provide an additional dowry. Cf. Diod. Sic. 12. 18. 2, 3. Such a girl was called ἐπίκληροs, and the person making application for her hand was said ἐπίδικόζεσθαι. Cf. note on Didascalia; Numbers xxxvi. 8. Demosthenes in Mac. 1067 ad fin. tells us that there was a fine of 500 drachmae for a πεντακοσιομέδιμνοs, 300 for a ἱππεύs, and 150 for a ζευχίτης.

127. scribam dicam = $\gamma \rho \dot{a} \psi o \mu a \iota \delta \iota \kappa \dot{\eta} \nu$. Cf. 329, 439, 668. Here there is a play upon dicam and dicam.

128. paternum amicum = fatris amicum; cf. 39 note. me, sub. esse.

130. qui, 'how;' cf. 123 note.

131. quod... commodum, 'as shall be good and expedient for my case.' Most editors connect this clause with what follows, but it seems more natural to take it with confingam, quod being adverbial.

132. quom . . . refelles. The case was to be undefended.

133. mihi paratae lites, 'I am in for a row;' a colloquial usage, cf. 219, Ad. 792.

quid mea, sc. refert? 'What care I?' Cf. 389, 723 notes.

134. iocularem audaciam! Acc. of exclamation. 'What amusing impudence!'

135. vincimur, plural because Geta identifies himself with Antipho.

137. quid te futurum est? 'What will become of you?' Cf. 811. Facere, fieri, esse, in the sense of 'to do anything with a person,' or 'become of a person,' are constructed with the Instrumental Ablative without a preposition, rarely with de and the Ablative. Cf. Andr. 614 quid me faciam? infra 42', Pl. Trin. 405 quid factum est co? Ad. 996 sed de fratre quid fiet? Cic. Fam. 14, 4, 3 quid Tulliola mea fiet? When a Dat. is found in similar phrases it is a Dat. commodi vel incommodi, e. g. Andr. 143 quid facias illi qui, etc., 'what would you do to the man who,' etc. Cf. Hor. Sat. 1. 1. 63.

138. Pyrrhus in Ennius An. 204 is made to say . . . quidve ferat fors virtute experiamur. This makes the sentiment in Geta's mouth yet more absurd.

placet, 'well said,' 'hear, hear.'

139. hem! Cf. 52 note.

139. hom! Cl. 52 hote ad precatorem adeam, credo, 'I am to betake myself to an intercessor, I suppose.' From allusions in the comedians, e.g. Heaut. 976, 1002, we gather that it was customary for a slave when in trouble to enlist the services of a precator. For credo parenthetical cf. 40.

141. amitte hune, 'let him off;' often in this sense in Plautus and Terence. Donatus says, quod nos dicimus dimittere, antiqui etiam dicebant amittere. Cf. 175, 176, 414, 918.

142-3. si quiequam, sub. faciat.

nil = an emphatic non; so also nullus, cf. Andr. 370 CH. Liberatus sum hodie, Dave, tua opera. DA. Ac nullus quidem.

tantummodo non addit, 'the only thing he leaves out.'

vel ŏccidito, 'you may kill him if you like.' In such sentences reference is made to the original sense of vel (from volo). On the quantity see p. 28. The Future Imperative is often used in familiar language of a single act, for the sake of greater emphasis. Cf. 166, 984.

144. paedagogus ille. Phaedria is comically so called because he escorted his music-girl to and from her school like a παιδαγωγός.

qui citharistriam, sc. sectatur. Cf. 86.

145. quid rei gerit? 'how does he get on?'

sic, tenuiter, 'so so, but poorly.' Cf. 5.

146. Note the Hiatus after fortasse, at a change of speaker. See p. 31.

147. quid? 'I say.' Cf. 64 note.

148. quoad expectatis? 'when are you expecting?' lit. 'up to what point of time are you waiting for?' quoad = quod ad = ad quod.

150. portitores, 'the custom-house officers,' who collected the portoria, harbour-dues. All letters brought by sea seem to have passed beneath their censorship. Cf. Pl. Trin. 793, 810.

151. num quid aliud me vis? 'is there anything further you want me for?' A common formula of leave-taking. Cf. 458, Ad. 247, Pl. Trin. 192, Hor. Sat. 1. 9. 6. Note the double Acc. after vis, as after a verb of asking. This construction is used by Terence more freely than by Augustan writers, e.g. with incuso 914, condono 947.

ut bene sit tibi, the polite rejoinder, which was changed by Demea in reply to Syrus, Ad. 432, to 'Mentem vobis meliorem dari.'

152. hoc, i. e. the money paid to him by Davus.

Dorcio. Dorcium was probably Geta's wife. Female names often ended in ium, an endearing diminutive, e.g. Phanium, Glycerium. A slave's marriage was not recognised at law either at Athens or Rome. Strictly the woman was in Latin a contubernalis, though practically she is sometimes termed uxor, e.g. Ad. 973.

ACT I. SCENE 3.

The young men, Antipho and Phaedria, appear in conversation. The former is dreading his father's return, the latter reproaches his cousin for his faint-heartedness, and contrasts his own love-lorn condition with that of Antipho, who is in full possession of the object of his affections.

153. adeon rem redisse, 'to think that things have come to such a pass.' Terence often uses the Acc. and Inf. to express excited or indignant exclamations and questions, as also Cicero, Livy, etc.

-ne is frequently found in such forms, because a question is implied if not expressed, e.g. 339; but naturally -ne is not used if the clause begins with non. e.g. 232-3.

redisse. For the spelling see 55 note, 460, etc.

qui mihi consultum optume velit esse, 'though he is anxious for my best interests,' a common phrase, consultum esse being used impersonally. qui is here concessive.

154. ut, repeated from line above. The clause patrem ut extimescam should be taken before qui mihi etc.

ubi in mentem eius adventi venit, 'when a thought of his arrival occurs to me.' This construction of venire in mentem with a Genitive is not unfrequent in Cicero, e.g. Sull. 6. 19 cum matronarum ac virginum veniebat in mentem. The phrase is almost equivalent to meminisse in meaning and so takes the same construction. It may be impersonal as here, or personal with the subject thought of in the nominative, as Liv. 8. 5 non venit in mentem pugna apud Regillum lacum. Cf. Madv. § 291, obs. 3. All MSS. give venit, except that the late corrector of A has introduced an A, whence most editors read veniat.

adventi, archaic for adventûs. In Old Latin the Gen. of U-Stems ended in -uos. In Terence a form in -uis once occurs, Heaut. 287 anuis, but the Gen. in -i, as though from an O-Stem, is common. Only the form -ûs is employed by Augustan writers, but Ennius, Lucretius, Plautus, and Terence use both forms side by side. We find in Terence adventi, domi, fructi, ornati, quaesti, tumulti. Neither Plautus nor Terence ever write domis.

155. quod, 'whereas,' both here and 157 quod is an adverbial Acc. loosely used as a connective particle, a characteristic idiom of comic diction.

ut par fuit, 'as was right;' par is so used by Cicero.

156. quid istuc? 'what do you mean by that?' The MSS. give quid istuc est? est is omitted, following Bentley, metri causa.

qui, causal, 'seeing that you.' Cf. 471.

157. quod. Cf. 155 note, Cic. Fam. 14. 4. 1 quod utinam minus vitae cupidi fuissemus; and for id following quod Andr. 258 quod si ego rescissem id prius, etc.

utinam ne. Cicero uses both ne and non after utinam.

158. neu is for et ne, as neque is for et non.

neu cupidum eo inpulisset, 'and had not urged on my desires to that act: 'eo lit. 'thither,' i. e. to the marriage. Cf. 201.

159. non potitus essem, 'I should not have won her.'

fuisset . . . dies, 'then I should have been wretched for the next few days.'

160. cotidiana. Neither the spelling nor the quantities of this word seem to have been settled. Martial, 11. 1. 2 writes cotidiana or quotidiana, Catullus 68. 141 (139) cotidiana or cotificiana, though R. Ellis and most modern editors of Catullus replace the word by some conjectural emendation.

audio, 'I understand.'

161. dum expecto etc. Antipho continues his sentence, not heeding Phaedria's audio.

consuetudinem, 'loving intercourse,' often so used in Plautus and Terence.

162. The order is 'Aliis aegre est quia quod amant defit: tibi dolet quia (quod amas) superest. Tr. 'others fret from lack of bliss: you from surfeit.' For dolet impersonal cf. Ad. 272.

164. quidem hercle certo. Phaedria tries to make his sentence as emphatic as possible by the repetition of intensive words. Cf. Andr. 347 mea quidem hercle certe in dubio vita est, Gr. τοιγάρτοι, τοιγοροῦν.

165. ita me di bene ament, 'heaven preserve me.' Cf. 883, 954.

166. iam depecisci morte cupio, 'now would I gladly close the bargain with my life:' morte is Abl. of price, cf. Pl. Baech. 865 pacisci cum illo paulula pecunia potes.

tu conicito cetera, 'do you now compare the other points:' conicere = to place two propositions side by side, and so to draw a conclusion from them; cf. Gr. συμβάλλειν, and Juv. 6. 436 committit vates et comparat.

168. ut ne addam, 'not to mention.' Terence uses ut ne = ne negative purpose, e.g. 245, 314, 415, Andr. 259, and also = ut non negative result, e.g. 975. So Cicero, e.g. Verr. 2. 4. 28 nam res celatum voluerat... ut ne multi illud ante perciperent oculis quam populus Romanus: see a curious instance in Rosc. Amer. c. 20, where ut ne = 'provided that not:' ib. Lael. 42, 43, 60, 65, etc.

ingenuam liberalem, 'a lady born and bred.'

171. scelere, 'rascal.'

quo = quocum, which the later MSS. give.

172. plerique omnes, 'almost all of us;' the same phrase is found Andr. 55, Pl. Trin. 29.

nostri nosmet poenitet, 'we are ever discontented with our lot.' nosmet. The suffix -mct='self' is attached to ego and tu, rarely to meus. Conversely -pte='self,' 'own,' is commonly affixed to possessive pronouns, rarely to personal pronouns; while -te is found with cases of tu only. Cf. 280, 467, 766, 914.

173. videre. Plautus and Terence usually prefer the form in -re of second pers. sing. pass. to that in -ris except for metrical reasons. Cicero and Vergil follow the same custom except in the Pres. Ind. On the other hand Livy and Tacitus seldom use the form in -re.

174. de integro, 'freely.' The phrase Andr. 26 = 'anew.' In both cases the derivative meaning (in privative and stem of tango) is easily traced.

etiam (Gr. $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\iota$), 'even yet,' as often.

175. retinere, amare, amittere. So all MSS. Most editors, seeing the alternatives neque mittendi nec retinendi in 176, get rid of amare; e.g. retinere amorem an mittere (Dz., Fleck., etc.): retinere cam anne amittere (B. and W. following Dz. first ed.). Bentley reads retinere amare an mittere. To add amare to retinere is no doubt more loverlike than logical, but that seems hardly sufficient reason for altering Antipho's words, which all MSS, give without variation.

For amittere cf. 141 note.

176. ut neque mihi sit amittendi. So A with Donatus and Servius. This reading involves the scansion $mth\bar{\imath}$, which is uncommon in Terence. B C D E G P with A_2 insert eius after sit. If this reading be accepted it is an instance of the gerund used in a purely substantival sense, with a genitive after it, 'of the dismissal of her;' cf. Heaut. 29 novarum qui spectandi faciunt copiam, Hec. 372 eius (sc. uxoris) videndi cupidus recta consequor. This construction, which also occurs in Plautus, Lucretius, Cicero, and Suetonius, is instructive as showing how entirely the gerund was recognised as a verbal noun. One MS. F gives mi ius sit.

177. videon ... advenire? 'Do I see Geta come running hither?'

178. ipsus = ipse, common in Plautus and Terence.

ei, interjection, often written hei.

ACT I. SCENE 4.

Geta appears in great perturbation, having heard of the sudden arrival of Demipho. Phaedria and the slave try to screw Antipho's courage to the sticking-point, but in vain. When the old man is seen approaching Antipho hurriedly decamps, leaving his cousin to bear the brunt of his father's anger.

179. nullus es, 'you are done for,' a colloquial phrase. Cf. 942, Andr. 509.

celere. This is the usual form of the adverb in Terence.

reperis. Here repperis is found in A B C D F P, reppereris in D_2 G and Priscian, repereris E. Probably reperis is the true reading, as mistakes of this sort often occur in the MSS.; e. g. in 192 five good MSS. read repperiam for reperiam.

180. to inpendent. A very rare construction, inpendere being followed by Dat. or in with Acc. Cf. Lucilius ut quae res me inpendet agatur, also Lucr. 1. 326 mare quae inpendent. Lucretius also uses incidere and accidere with an Accus.

181. uti, 'how,' as often.

183. quidnam? 'about what?' adverbial Acc.

184. 'Then I have but a moment to consider this affair.'

punctum temporis is rather a favourite phrase of Cicero. Cf. στιγμή χρόνου.

185. quod, sc. Antipho's marriage.

186. laterem lavem, 'I should be washing a brick;' a translation of the Greek proverb $\pi \lambda i \nu \theta o \nu \pi \lambda i \nu e s$. The meaning is, 'it would be worse than useless.' Greek bricks were made of clay baked in the sun, so that the more they were washed the more dirty they would become. Cf. Xen. Hell. 5. 2. 5.

187. quom . . . tum. This sentence shows well how these conjunctions, at first purely temporal, come to be used as particles of connexion. Here you might translate, 'while' . . . 'then,' or 'not only' animi is a Locative like humi, domi, etc.: cf. Ad. 610 discrucior animi.

188. nam absque eo esset, 'for were it not for him.' Plautus and Terence only use absque in the protasis of conditional sentences with si omitted as here. In the Augustan period absque is only used in a few quasi-juridical formulae, e. g. absque sententia, 'without judgment.' Cf. Pl. Trin. 832, 1127.

absque was formed by adding -que (its copulative force being lost) to abs, which was a collateral form of ab (cf. in, if), used before words beginning with e, q, t. As early however as Plautus, abs is rarely found except before te. Cicero usually wrote abs te up to about B. C. 55. Occasional uses of abs in later authors, e.g. Livy, are probably intentional archaisms. In as-pello, as-porto, a-spernor (for as-spernor), the b has fallen out. Cf. Pl. Pers. 159 abs chorago; infra 201, 378, 617, 840.

189. vidissem = providissem, colloquial.

190. aliquid convasassem, 'I should have packed a few things together:' convasare is ἄπαξ λεγόμενον in classical literature. It is taken from the military phrase vasa colligere, 'to pack up.' The few things would be of course his master's property.

protinam, archaic form of protinus, but scanned protinam, anather. in Terence. All MSS, here read protinus, but Donatus gives protinam, which is required by the metre and confirmed by Pl. Bacc. 374.

192. qua quaerere insistam via? 'where (lit. by what road) shall I begin to look for him?' insistere, 'to stand' or 'press upon' may be constructed with a Dat. or in with Abl. or a simple Acc.; while in the sense of 'to set about,' 'to begin,' it is followed by an Inf. as here. A confusion of these usages probably accounts for the reading viam in A F G. In Eun. 294 quam insistam viam? there is no Infinitive.

193. nescio quod magnum... malum, 'some great calamity or other.' If nescio quod had meant 'I do not know what,' the following verb would have been in the Subj. Nescio quid, 'somewhat,' is often used to qualify a verb or adjective. Nescio may be scanned as a dactyl, or as a spondee by Synizesis. Cf. p. 31.

194. sanun = sanusne.

ibi plurimum est, 'he is mostly there.'

195. ilico may here be of place, 'where you are,' or of time, 'at once.' Cf. 88 note.

satis pro inperio, sub. loqueris, 'you give your orders peremptorily enough.'

196. The grammatical order is Ipse est obviam, quem volui, 'here is the very man I want.' Cf. Andr. 532 eccum ipsum obviam.

197. cëdö, 'tell me.' This archaic imperative ('tell me' or 'give me') is used by Cicero. The plural cette is only found in old Latin. Cf. 321, 329, 398, 550, 642, 692, etc.

verbo expedi, 'explain it in a word.'

198. meumne = meumne patrem vidisti? a striking ellipse.

intellexti. A similar syncope (is being omitted) of verbs whose Perf. Ind. ends in -si, -xi, is used by Latin poets:

(1) in the second pers. sing. Perf. Ind. (often), e.g. dixti (often), e.g. 537, and second pers. plur. (rarely).

(2) in Perf. Infin. Cf. Ad. 561 produxe, Heaut. 32 decesse, ib.

(3) in all persons sing. and first pers. plur. of Pluperf. Subj.; but none of this set occur in Terence.

The syncope of -avisti, -avissem, -ovisti, -ovissem, etc., into -asti, -assem, -osti, -ossem, etc., is too common to require detailed notice.

Hem! This is an exclamation of surprise at Antipho's consternation. Phaedria, not having so guilty a conscience, had not been so quick to catch Geta's meaning.

199. quid ais? a common phrase in Terence; used,

(I) as a request for information, usually when a remark has not been heard or understood, as here. Cf. 833.

(2) as an exclamation of surprise or anger at some remark which seems scarcely credible, e. g. 755, 873, 1040.

(3) to introduce a new point in conversation, or to call attention, like dis donc. 'What do you say to this?' 'look here.' Cf. 798 note. 200. nam etc. may follow on from quid agam? or nam quod may = quodnam, as is not unfrequent in Terence, e. g. 732.

201. eo. Cf. 158. Both eo and meae are here scanned as monosyllables.

abs. Cf. 188 note.

Phānium was Antipho's young wife.

203. fortis fortuna adiuvat, 'fortune favours the brave,' a proverb found in most languages. Cf. Menan. Fr. τόλμη δικαία καὶ Θεὸς συλλαμβάνει, Soph. Fr. 12 (Brunck), οὐ τοῖς ἀθύμοις ἡ τυχὴ συλλαμβάνει, Verg. A. 10. 285 audentes fortuna iuvat.

204. non sum apud me, '1 am not myself at all;' a colloquial phrase, cf. Andr. 408, 937.

nunc quom maxume, 'now most particularly.' Cf. Ad. 518, Andr. 823.

ut sis, sc. apud te.

206. inmutarier, 'change my nature,' lit. 'change myself.' Many cases occur where traces of the old Middle Voice can be clearly seen under Passive forms. Cf. 92 note.

208. quom hoc non possum, 'since I cannot do this.' Cf. 23 note.

hoc nil est: ilicet, 'this is nonsense: let us be off.'

ilicet=ire licet was a formula of dismissal from an assembly, funeral, or other ceremonial gathering; see Conington's note on Verg. A. 6. 231. Cf. Ad. 791, where ilicet='it is all up.'

209. quin abeo? 'why do I not go?' equivalent in meaning to

'I am off.' Note the following uses of quin (qui-ne):

(1) 'why not?' either in direct or indirect questions. As may be seen from the present passage this meaning passes easily into 'indeed,' 'verily,' without a question. Cf. 429, 538, 1015.

(2) with Imperatives. This use is a natural development of the first; for quin taces? is equivalent in sense to tace. Cf. 223, 359, 486, 857, 882, 935.

(3) as a corroborative particle, 'indeed,' 'verily;' sometimes further strengthened by etiam. Cf. Ad. 262 quin omnia sibi post putavit esse frae meo commodo.

(4) in the common sense, 'but that,' after verbs expressing doubt, prevention, or the like, with a negative. Cf. 272, 697, etc.

210. quid si adsimulo? 'what if I assume an air.'

em! Cf. 52 note. In 212 em istuc scans as em istuc.

212. par pari ut respondeas, 'take care to answer tit for tat:' ut is here used elliptically, like $\tilde{u}\pi\omega s$ (Goodwin's Moods and Tenses, § 45, note 7), depending on some Imperative like cave or fac understood.

213. saevidicis is ἄπαξ λεγόμενον.

protelet, only ante- and post-classical, probably derived from pro and tendo, and so not connected with either Gr. $\tau \hat{\eta} \lambda \epsilon$ or telum (tex-lum), 'a missile weapon.' Protelum is used by Cato and Lucilius for 'a team of oxen harnessed in single file,' thence in Lucr. 2. 531 undique protelo plagarum continuato, 'a continuous succession of blows,' ib. 4. 190. So too in legal language protelare='to prolong by successive delays.' Here it forcibly expresses the idea of a rapid succession of attacks which might prevent Antipho from getting in a word of defence. Tr., 'lest in his anger he should rout you with his furious broadsides.'

214. coactum to esse, sub. responde.

tenes? 'do you understand?' In the same sense in Andr. 300, 349, 498, etc.

215. in ultima platea, 'at the bottom of the street.' For platea cf. 14 note.

219. litis. Cf. 133.

220. ego plectar pendens, 'I shall be hung up and flogged.' Cf. Pl. Trin. 247 ibi pendentem ferit.

221. modo. Cf. 93 note.

223. aufer mi 'oportet,' ought me no oughts.' Phaedria means 'stop your platitudes and tell me something practical.'

quin. Cf. 200 note.

225. ad defendendam noxiam, 'to protect ourselves from blame.'

226. 'That Phormio's suit was righteous, all plain sailing, sure to win, most equitable.'

vincibilem may be either Active 'convincing,' or Passive 'easy to be maintained.' In Augustan Latin verbal adjectives in -bilis have nearly always a passive signification; but in earlier periods the meaning is often active. Cf. 961 and Ad. 608 placabilius; Verg. G. I. 93 Boreae penetrabile frigus; Ov. Met. 13. 857 penetrabile fulmen; Hor. Od. I. 3. 22 dissociabilis (Oceanus); exitiabilis = exitialis in Plautus, Cicero, Livy, Ovid, and Tacitus; Lucretius uses genitabilis, mactabilis; Horace has illacrimabilem Plutonem (act.), and illacrimabiles urgentur (pass.), Muuro Lucr. I. II, Livy 31. 17, and 9. 26 exsecrabile.

227. em! 'see now!'

230. subconturiatus, 'as a reserve,' lit. 'a man to fill a vacancy in a centuria.' Geta is fond of military metaphors. Cf. 320, 346-7.

In this Play, as in the Adelphi, the division of Acts and Scenes in the MSS. is dramatically impossible, and is doubtless due to a copyist's ignorance. This edition adopts the arrangement found in practice to be the most natural and convenient, but the old numbering of Acts and Scenes is preserved in brackets for purposes of reference.

In MSS. In this edition

1100	r chas	at mic	2 3 O.	1100	1 Chus	att IIIIC	314.
,,	II	,,	464.	,,	II	,,	566.
,,	III	,,	566.	,,	III	,,	765.
,,	IV	,,	727.	,,	IV	,,	893.

Terence probably wrote his plays to be performed without a break. The division into Acts was most likely made by grammarians of the Augustan or a later age.

ACT I. SCENE 5. [ACT II. SCENE 1.]

Demipho is boiling over with rage at his son's unauthorised and imprudent marriage. Phaedria loyally defends his cousin, and assisted by Geta makes every possible excuse. Between them they manage to divert the old man's wrath upon Phormio's head.

231. itane tandem, etc., 'is it possible that A. has actually married a wife?' itane emphasises the question which is further strengthened by tandem, as frequently in Cicero. Cf. 315, 373, 413, 527.

232. ac mitto inperium, 'and not to mention authority.' Cf. 293. The Calliopian MSS. give age for ac.

233. revereri. Cf. 153 note. The subject eum is omitted, as often in Terence before an Infinitive.

234. monitor. Cf. Hor. A. P. 163 iuvenis monitoribus asper. In law, 'a prompter for counsel.'

vix tandem! sc. meministi mei, or some such words; spoken ironically. Cf. Andr. 470 vix tandem sensi stolidus.

235. aliud cura, 'think of something else,' 'try again.'

237. causam tradere etc., i.e. as a praevaricator. Tr. 'but the deliberate betrayal of the case without a word!'

238. illud durum, 'that's a poser.'

242. meditari, 'to rehearse.' Cf. 248.

advorsam aerumnam, 'the attacks of trouble.'

243. peregre is used for 'coming from abroad,' 'going abroad,' and 'rest abroad.' Cf. 970.

cogitet, sub. quisque.

245. communia esse haec, 'let him think that these are common misfortunes.'

ut ne quid. Cf. 168 note.

The text gives the MSS. reading. Many editors follow Cicero's version as quoted Tusc. 3. 14. 30:

Pericla, damna, peregre rediens semper secum cogitet

Communia esse hace, nequid horum umquam accidat animo novum. 246. deputare esse in lucro, 'to reckon as clear gain;' deputare depends on oportet, supplied from 242.

248. meditata, one of the many instances of a deponent Perf. Part.

used in a passive sense: cp. 242 note.

249. A reads molendum esse, which cannot stand with habendae compedes. B C E F P and Donatus give usque.

The pistrinum answered to our 'tread-mill' as a means of punishment. 250. opus ruri faciundum. To degrade a confidential body-servant to be a farm-labourer would be of course a severe punishment.

opus often means farm-labour in Terence, e.g. 363.

251. Cf. the similar parody of Demea's words by Syrus, Ad. 425-9.

255. salvom venire, sc. gaudeo. The ordinary salutation to one who has arrived after a journey. Cf. 286.

credo, 'I take that for granted.' Cf. 610.

258. confecistis, 'you have trumped up.'

259. id, Cognate Acc. 'about that:' so quod in 263, 1052. O! arseems to scan as one syllable: cf. 360, 368, 853, 930, Introd. p. 31.

260. egon...suscenseam? 'Could I help being angry with him?' Cf. 207. 304 notes.

262. lenem patrem illum . . . me, 'that I, formerly (illum) the kindest of fathers.'

264. similia omnia, 'it's all of a piece.'

congruent. Cf. 9 note.

266-7. 'When A gets into trouble, B is his advocate: when B is in a scrape, A turns up: it's a co-operative concern.' Cf. 835-6.

hic as Nom. Sing. is usually short in Plautus and Terence, long in Augustan poets. See however 1028.

268. inprudens, 'unwittingly,' because he knows nothing of Phaedria's love-affairs.

269. cum illo haud stares, 'you would not be his partisan:' stare ab aliquo or ab alicuius causa = 'to be on a man's side:' stare pro aliquo = 'to be a man's champion.'

270. si est, 'if it is the fact.'

271. minus... temperans, 'he was inconsiderate as to fortune or to fame,' i.e. in marrying a penniless girl of ignoble birth. rei and famae are probably Genitives: temperare in this sense usually takes a Dat., but temperans is also found with a Gen. = 'temperate in.'

272. quin follows the idea of 'prevention' contained in non causam dico. Cf. 209 note.

276-7. adimunt diviti . . . addunt pauperi. This would have been more likely at Athens than at Rome.

280. tua iusta, 'the rights of your case.'

tute. Cf. 172 note. 281-2. functus adulescentuli est Officium liberalis, 'he acted like an ingenuous youth.' Fungor governs the Acc. in Plautus and Terence, except in Ad. 603 tuo officio fueras functus, where the MSS. give the Abl. Conversely fruor is constructed with the Abl. in Terence, except in Heaut. 401, where the Acc. is found: utor takes an Abl. except perhaps in Ad. 815, but abutor an Acc. For potior cf. 469 note. Lucretius constructs fungor, fruor, potior with Acc.; abutor with Acc. and Abl.

284. timidum. Antipho being really of a timid nature, cf. 204 sqq.,

this statement sounded plausible enough.

obstupēfecit. When preceded by a short syllable the e in compounds of this class is usually shortened, following the analogy of the 'Iambic Law,' p. 27, but Catullus 64. 361 has tepēfaciet.

289. iam dudum . . . audio, 'I have been hearing you for some time; 'cf. Fr. depuis longtemps je vous entends.

dudum may refer to time past, immediate or distant; e.g. 537, 786, 838 'just now,' in Pl. Trin. quam dudum? = 'how long ago?' Cf. 459, 471.

290. horune = horum-ce, cf. 58 note.

292. servom hominem, 'one who is a slave;' both homo and mulier are often thus used in apposition. At Athens the evidence of slaves was only taken under torture, at Rome not at all against their masters, except in certain specified cases.

293. dictio. Verbal substantives in -io are sometimes followed by the same case as the verb: e.g. Andr. 44 exprobratio est immemori. Still more remarkable is the use of the Acc. by Plautus after receptio, curatio, tactio (very often after the last).

mitto. Cf. 232.

294. do is Fleckeisen's emendation for addo or adde. It gives a better sense and seems necessary for the metre.

207. dotem daretis. Cf. 125 note, and for the tense 108 note.

Cf. Verg. A. 4. 678 eadem me ad fata vocasses, 'you should have invited me to share your fate,' where the context makes it almost = debebas vocare; ib. 8. 643 at tu dictis, Albane, maneres,=debuisti manere; Cic. pro Sulla 8. 25 ac si, judices, ceteris patriciis me et vos peregrinos videri oporteret, a Torquate tamen hoc vitium sileretur; infra 298, 468, Heaut. 201-2 fortasse aliquantum iniquior erat... pateretur, i.e. 'he should have borne it.' These Subjunctives are 'Jussive,' expressing an unfulfilled obligation in past time. Roby 670.

298. qua ratione, 'on what account.' There is a play on the word ratio which Demipho uses as 'reason,' Geta as 'a money account.' Cf. Pl. Trin. 418-9:—

LE. Nequaquam argenti ratio comparet tamen.

ST. Ratio quidem hercle adparet: argentum oixerai.

299. deerat. In this verb ee is scanned by Synizesis as \bar{e} by Vergil, Catullus, etc., as well as by Terence.

sumeret, sc. mutuom argentum, 'he should have borrowed it.'

302. crederet, 'would have given us credit.' At Rome the Lex quina vicenaria (Lex Plaetoria) forbade loans to young men under five and twenty; cf. Pl. Ps. 303; as did also the Senatus-consultum Macedonianum. But it is not clear that we have here a specific allusion to Roman law, which is against our author's custom; cf. p. 16.

303. potest, impersonal, as often in Terence: e. g. 402, 640, 674, 818. 304. egon...ut patiar. Note the emphatic ego. Madvig (§ 353 obs.) explains this construction as = fierine potest ut etc. Cf. 669, 874. 955, etc. Sometimes -ne is omitted, e. g. Andr. 618; sometimes ut, e.g. supra 260. Translate, 'to think that I should put up with her marriage with him for a single day.'

305. nil suave meritum est, 'they have deserved no indulgence,' lit. 'nothing indulgent has been deserved' sc. 'by them.' The Perf. Part. Pass. of mereo is used by Cicero, Livy, etc., though not often. Donatus interprets nihil mihi mercedis suave est ut ego illam cum illo nuptam feram, 'nothing could persuade me to permit the marriage.'

commonstrarier. Cf. 92 note.

307. ně(m)pe, often scanned thus in Plautus and Terence, when the first syllable is unaccented. In some MSS. it is then written nepe. See Introduction on Prosody, p. 30.

308. iam faxo hic aderit, 'I will fetch him here at once.'

faxo. Plautus and Terence use the following: faxo (Ind.), faxim (Subj.) faxis, faxit (Ind. or Subj.), faxīmus (Subj.), faxitis (Ind. or Subj.), faxint (Subj.). Cf. 554.

Three views are held with regard to these forms:-

(1) They may be syncopated forms for fecero, fecerim, etc.; cf.

Zumpt. § 161, Peile Etymology, p. 197.

(2) They may be archaic futures, formed exactly like the Greek by adding -so to the verb-stem, e. g. fac-so = fax0 as $\pi\rho\alpha\gamma$ - $\sigma\omega = \pi\rho\alpha'\xi\omega$; the tense in -sim being the Subjunctive; cf. Roby, §§ 291-3, Madv. § 115 f.

(3) King and Cookson (p. 463) consider faxo, faxim, amasso, amassim, etc., to be conjunctive and optative forms of the sigmatic aorist. Cp. 742.

The philological uncertainty is not removed by the practical usage of these forms. In the present passage it is quite an open question (cf. 681 note), but faxo is often used where a Fut. simple would naturally stand, and in Ad. 847-8 is a direct co-ordinate of faciam Fut. The Subjunctive form is never used as a Perf. Subj., but always as a Fut.; cf. the epitaph of Ennius, Nemo me lacrimis decorct nec funera fletu Faxit. Cur? volito vivu' per ora vivum;

the common phrase di faxint expressive of a wish, Hor. Sat. 2. 3. 38 cave faxis, and the use of ausim. Vergil, Livy, Ovid, and Horace occasionally employ these forms, and di faxint is found even in Cicero. Cf. 742 note. As regards construction faxo is followed four times in Terence by the Fut. Ind., here, 1055, Eun. 285, 663, thrice by the Pres. Subj., Ad. 209, 847 (placed after the Subj.), and Andr. 854. It is also constructed with an Acc. and a Perf. Past. Pass., infra 1028. Probably the Indicative is grammatically independent: cf. 358 note. Augustan writers always use the Subjunctive construction.

foris, 'out,' an Abl. plur. of the obsolete fora, used as an adverb meaning 'rest out of doors:' so foras—'motion out of doors.'

309. adduc. Terence always uses duc in the simple form, but in composition either -duce or -duc. A always gives the shorter form if the metre does not require the longer, except in Heaut. 744 TRADVCEHVC: conversely the later MSS. always read the longer form except for metrical reasons, e.g. Eun. 377, and one MS. F which gives traduc in Heaut. 744. Of Imperatives usually syncopated Plautus sometimes writes dice, duce, never fere, and in both the comic poets face often appears, but only at the end of lines, e.g. 397, 674. Otherwise Terence uses the shortened forms. The rule in Augustan Latin was to use exclusively dic, duc, fer, fac, and similarly in the compounds of duco, fero, and those of facio which retain a in the stem; but other compounds of facio and those of dico retain the final e: e.g. educ, affer, calefac, but confice, edice.

311. The order is, Ego devortar hine domum salutatum deos penatis.

313. adsient, archaic for adsint. Terence uses siem, sies, siet, sient: also possiem, possiet, adsiet. Cf. 446, 508, 514, 635, 675, 773, 806, 822.

ACT II. SCENE 1 [2].

In the interval between the Acts Geta has met Phormio and informed him of the arrival and the anger of Demipho. Phormio is confident that he can carry the matter through; he boasts of the impunity with which he has preyed upon the wealthier citizens, and describes the delightful freedom from anxiety enjoyed by a parasite.

315. itane . . . ais. Tr. 'Do you really mean to say' etc. Cf. 231 note. The metre requires pātris or aīs.

admodum, 'certainly.' An affirmative answer may also be expressed by etiam, ita, factum, ofpido, sane, scilicet, sic, vero, verum, etc.: or by repeating the verb, e.g. hoc facies? faciam: or by a pronoun, e.g. hoc facies? ego vero. Cf. 316, 382, 524, 811-12.

oppido, 'very much so,' a colloquial word, found in Cicero's Letters, etc., but not in his Orations; obsolete in the time of Quintilian. The derivation is doubtful. Festus says it arose from a frequent answer to an enquiry as to a man's crops, 'quantum vel oppido satis est.' Whence oppido became equivalent to 'valde multum.' Cf. 763, 896.

318. tute hoc intristi: tibi omne est exedendum, a proverb, lit. 'you have mixed the mess, you must eat it up.' In English, 'you have made your bed and you must lie upon it.' Cf. Auson. Id. vi Tibi quod intristi exedendum est: sic vetus verbum iubet, | Compedes, quas ipse fecit, ipsus ut gestet faber.

intristi = intrivisti, from the rare intero, referring here to the grating of various ingredients into a mortar, and then pounding them.

319. eccere, 'see there!' from ecce and re ('in fact') or rem.

320. quid si reddet? 'What if he shall give the girl back?' It might however be, 'What if he shall reply?' Cf. 877 note. Note that from 317 to 320 Phormio is buried in thought, uttering aloud only disconnected fragments of sentences, and paying no attention whatever to Geta's ejaculations.

321. cedo senem, 'bring the old fellow out.' Cf. 197 note.

322. crimine, 'reproach.'

323. derivem, 'divert,' a metaphor from turning the current of a stream (de-rivus).

325. in nervom erumpat, 'should end by landing you in the stocks.'

Cf. 696.

nervom, lit. 'a sinew,' then 'a fetter,' especially used of a fetter for the feet and sometimes the neck, like our stocks or pillory. This use of erumpat is colloquial.

326. periclum, 'trial,' its original sense.

iam pedum visa est via, 'I can keep my feet out of harm's way by this time,' said with reference to in nervom.

327. usque ad necem, 'almost to death,' 'within an inch of their lives.' Notice this sense of usque ad, 'right up to, but just stopping short of.

328. hospites, here 'aliens,' Gr. Eévoi.

quo magis novi, sc. viam, from 326, 'the better I know the way, the oftener I do it,' or; 'the better I know them,' etc.

329. cedo dum, 'tell me now.' dum is often used by the comic writers as an enclitic with Imperatives and Interjections, e.g. ehodum: and we also find quidum (interrogative) and primumdum. In later Latin this use of -dum is confined to agedum, agitedum, and nondum, nedum, vixdum, dudum, interdum, Cf. 504, 784, etc.

en umquam. These words are often used together (some write enumquam) in animated questions where the answer 'no' is expected:

en serving to arrest attention. Cf. 348.

iniuriarum . . . dĭcam, Gr. aἰκίας δίκην, or in aggravated cases γραφην ύβρεως. Tr. 'that a prosecution for assault was brought against me.' Cf. 983.

330. qui istue ? 'how is that?' Cf. 123 note.

tenditur, so all MSS. Most modern editors prefer tennitur, which is mentioned by Donatus as a various reading, probably representing the vulgar pronunciation.

Cf. Old English proverb, 'Stones and sticks are flung only at fruit-bearing trees.'

332. quia enim, 'because indeed.' Cf. 113 note.

illis . . . illis. Note the very uncommon use of the same pronoun to contrast two sets of people. On the stage the actor's gestures would prevent the possibility of mistake.

334. Notice the emphatic alliteration. Cf. I note. In default of payment of damages legally awarded, both Athenian and Roman law authorised the creditor to seize the person of the debtor (addictus) and treat him as a slave.

337. illo, sc. Antiphone.

338. immo enim. Cf. 113 note.

regi, 'his patron.' Cf. 70 note.

339. tene asymbolum venire, 'to think that you should come with no contribution to the feast.' It was a common Greek custom that each person dining should contribute his quota, called $\sigma\nu\mu\beta\delta\lambda\dot{\eta}$ in Greek, collecta by Cicero de Or. 2. 57. 233. Cf. Andr. 88 symbolam dedit, cenavit. Cf. 153 note. Hence the use of immunis, 'without a gift,' in Hor. Od. 4. 12. 22, Verg. G. 4. 244, Pl. Tr. 350.

340. otiosum ab animo, 'easy in mind:' ab denotes here, as often, the direction from which the matter in question is viewed. Cf. a fronte, a tergo, etc.

341. ringitur, 'he chafes,' lit. 'he snarls.'

tu rideas, 'you can laugh.'

342. prior bibas, etc., 'you can drink before him, you can have a better place at table.'

dubia, 'puzzling.' Cf. Fr. embarras de richesse, Hor. Sat. 2. 2. 77 vides ut pallidus omnis Cena desurgat dubia.

347. postillā = posteā, only ante-Augustan. Tr. 'directly after that you may play with him as you please.' Cf. 705.

ACT II. SCENE 2 [3].

Geta, pretending not to see the entrance of Demipho with his friends, defends his master with much simulated warmth; while Phormio affects righteous indignation. Demipho assails the parasite hotly, but meets his match. Phormio is not to be out-faced, but answers threat with threat; and though at one time nearly nonplussed by forgetting Stilpho's name, eventually leaves the field victorious.

348. en umquam. Cf. 329 note.

350. age. All Calliopian MSS, with A_2 read ages. The meaning would be the same. Cf. 209 note. Tr. 'now do you attend to this.'

351. ego hunc agitabo, 'I will stir him up.'

pro deum inmortalium, sub. fidem: cf. pro divom fidem etc. The interjection pro does not affect the case of the word before which it stands; cf. pro luppiter l Cf. 757 note, 1008.

356. After 355 is inserted in the MSS.,

PH. Nec Stilphonem ipsum scire qui fuerit? GE. Negat.

This must be a gloss, as is shown clearly by 386-9.

357. ignoratur, 'is disowned.' Cf. Pl. Trin. 264, Verg. A. 6. 615, 780.

358. vide avaritia quid facit. Note the Indicative. 'In conversational or animated language a question is often put logically though not grammatically dependent on another verb or sentence, e. g. on such expletives as die mihi, loquere, cedo, responde, expedi, narra, vide: rogo, volo scire, fac sciam, viden, audin, scin, etc. So frequently in Plautus and Terence, even where later writers would make the question dependent and use the Subjunctive. Compare, 'Tell me, where are you?' and 'Tell me where you are.' Roby § 751. Cf. 987.

350. Geta, as well as Phormio, is of course playing a part, intending to be overheard by Demipho.

male audies. Cf. 20 note.

360. Tr. 'What impudence! he is actually going to prosecute me.'

ultro, lit. 'beyond what might be expected:' contrasted with sponte, which merely means 'willingly.' Here Phormio does not wait to be made a defendant, but intends, as Demipho thinks, himself to prosecute. This meaning of ultro may be expressed here by emphasising the pronouns. Cf. 769. O! au- seems to scan as one sylable. Cf. 259.

362. illum, sc. Phanium's father, cf. 357.

norat = noverat: Indic. because the supposition was represented as a fact.

iam grandior, 'of some considerable age.' Notice this use of the Comparative; cf. Vergil's iam senior etc.

363. quoi in opere vita erat, 'who worked for his livelihood.'

365. interea, 'during that time.'

366. The order is, narrabat hunc cognatum suom neglegere se.

367. quem ego viderim etc. 'the most worthy man perhaps that I have seen in my life.' The Subjunctive probably qualifies what would otherwise be a downright statement, as is done in English by 'perhaps.'

368. videas te atque illum, ut narras, 'compare yourself and him according to your account,' i. e. 'what a contrast between such an excellent man as you describe and a rascal like yourself.' The meaning must be uncomplimentary to account for Phormio's rejoinder. Some explain thus, 'do you see to your stories about yourself and him, it is nothing to us:' or, 'see what lies you are telling about yourself and him.' Bentley's version, vidisti nullum ut narras, has the merit of simplicity. For scansion of I in, cf. 250, 360 notes.

i in malam crucem! 'go and be hanged.' Gr. ἔρρ' ἐς κόρακας. Cf. 930 i hinc in malam rem.

369. nam etc. This follows immediately on 367, Phormio disregarding Geta's interruption.

370. hanc, i. e. Phanium. Note the scansion ob hanc int | mīcitit | ās etc. Cf. Introd. on Metres.

373. tandem. Cf. 231 note.

carcer, 'jail-bird.'

374. extortor... contortor, 'you rascally robber, you pettifogging rogue.' Contortor is $\tilde{a}\pi a \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \gamma$., as is extortor in classical Latin.

378. adulescens, 'my young gentleman.'

abs te. Cf. 188 note.

bona venia, 'with your kind leave.'

379. potis est, 'it is possible:' potis may refer to a subject (rarely plural) of any gender, or may be used impersonally. The neuter pote is similarly employed, e. g. 535, but, unlike potis, is generally found without est. As a rule potis stands before vowels, pote before consonants. Neither potis nor pote occurs in Augustan prose.

380. tuom . . . istum. The addition of istum emphasises tuom, and gives moreover a contemptuous turn to the phrase.

381. qui, 'how;' cf. 123 note.

dieeret. The regular sequence of tenses would require dixerit. It is perhaps to be explained by the preceding fuisse which carries back the thought to past time, though grammatically the verb is of course dependent on explana.

382. nossem? Cf. 122 note.

383. ego me nego, sc. nosse (novisse).

tu, qui ais, 'do you, who make the assertion.'

384. enicas, 'you are worrying me to death.' Cf. 856.

386. perdidi, 'I have forgotten.'

387. subice, 'prompt me.'

388. temptatum, 'to try your tricks on me.' Supine in -um.

389. atque adeo. Note the uses of adeo-

I. 'so far,'

(a) of space, 55.

(b) of time, 589.

(c) of circumstance, 497, 932.

2. as an intensive particle with

(a) pronouns (common), 645, 906, 944.

(b) adjectives or adverbs, 679. Heaut. 386.

(c) conjunctions, as here. Tr. 'and after all'...

(d) verbs, Andr. 759 propera adeo puerum tollere. Heaut. 170.

Vergil constantly uses it in this intensive sense, e. g. A. 3. 203 tres adeo ... soles, 'three whole days,' ib. 7. 629 etc.

3. 'Moreover,' besides' (rare).

quid mea, sc. refert. Cf. 133, 723 note.

392. non te horum pudet? The same meaning is expressed Ad. 754 by non te hace pudent? the verb being either personal or impersonal in Terence: but when personal the Nominative is usually a neuter pronoun. The above seems more probable than to refer horum to Demipho's friends.

303. talentûm = talentorum, as nummûm etc. An Attic talent = 60 minae = $f_{.243}$ 15s. Cf. 644.

394-5. esses proferens = proferres. This is an early instance of the tendency of Latin, as of other languages, to become 'analytic;' i. e. to express changes of case, tense, mood, voice, or person by the addition of separate words, e.g. prepositions, auxiliary verbs, pronouns, etc., instead of by case-endings or verbal inflexions. The latter method is called 'synthetic.' Greek is a good example of a 'synthetic,' English of an 'analytic 'language. Analytic varieties are, however, more frequent in Greek than Latin. Cf. And. 508, 775 ut sis sciens = ut scias, Cic. Verr. i. 40 distributum habere = distribuisse: infra 946, 974.

atavo, 'great-great-great-grandfather.' The ascending steps of paternal ancestry were pater, avus, proavus, abavus (= avi avus), atavus, tritavus (= avi-avi-avus).

396. 'Exactly so: on coming before the court,' i.e. to claim his inheritance.

qui. Cf. 123 note.

397. face, archaic for fac, cf. 309 note.

398. cedo. Cf. 197 note. qui. Cf. 123 note.

eu, Gr. εὖ, so euge, Gr. εὖγε. Tr. 'well done our side.'

400. si fuerat. The Pluperf. Indic. after si is rare.

401. filium narras mihi? 'What! talk to me of my son?' Terence sometimes uses narrare = to speak about,' 'to mention.'

402. potest, impersonal, cf. 303.

403. magistratus adi, 'make an application before the magistrates,' so followed by ut and Subj. because equivalent to a verb of asking.

405. solus regnas. Cf. Ad. 175 regnumne, Aeschine, tu hic possides? Pl. Trin. 695 quid? te dictatorem censes fore? This can hardly be considered as a distinctively Roman allusion, since a 'tyrant' at Athens was almost as great a bug-bear as a 'king' at Rome. Phormio would of course lay special emphasis on alterum, eadem, bis, as well as on solus regnas and soli.

To have a case heard twice was illegal at Athens, cf. Dem. Lept.

p. 502; but at Rome there might be a 'restitutio in integrum,' cf. 451.

409. ut . . . si instead of the usual quasi, because ut naturally follows itidem.

410. dotis dare etc. The logical order would be, abduc hanc, minas quinque accipe, id dotis quod lex iubet dare. The omission of the subject of dare makes the statement more general, as we should say in English, 'the dowry which the law orders one to give;' dari would have been more usual, dare being probably more colloquial. Denipho's excitement quite accounts for the irregular order of the clauses.

abduc. Cf. 309 note.

minas. The Attic mina = 100 drachmae = f_4 . is. 3d.

411. homő. Cf. komö 123. 413. tandem. Cf. 231 note.

414. amittere = dimittere. Cf. 141 note

415. ut ne. Cf. 168 note.

418. at nos unde, sc. proxumi sumus? 'but where does she get us from?'

419. 'actum,' aiunt, 'ne agas,' 'the proverb says, "don't kill a dead dog."' The Latin proverb is from the law-courts, 'don't bring on a case already decided,' cf. Ad. 232.

420. ineptis. Terence only uses the verb here and Ad. 934.

sine modo, 'do you just let me alone:' modo emphasises the Imperative. Cf. 496.

426. tu te idem melius feceris, 'it would be better to do the same with yourself,' i. e. to leave the house yourself. It is best to consider te as Abl. after feceris, cf. 137 note, and idem as neuter.

427. advorsom is rarely, as here, put after its case; cf. Sall. Jug.

101. 8 quos advorsum ierat.

428. infelix, 'wretch.'

429. quin. Cf. 209.

432. to visum...velim? 'should I wish for the sight of you?' Cf. 102 note.

435. hoc age, 'attend to this:' a common phrase.

439. dicam tibi inpingam grandem, 'I will bring an action against you with swingeing damages.' Cf. 127 note.

440. si quid opus fuerit. The constructions of opus and usus arc,

(1) personal, with the thing needed in the Nom. as a subject. The phrase may be completed by ad with an Acc., or by an Abl. which is sometimes a Perf. Pass. Part., e. g. 762 quid facto opus est, more rarely a supine. Cf. Roby, § 507, infra 563 note, 593.

(2) impersonal, with the thing needed in the Abl. which may be a substantive, adjective, or participle, very rarely in the Gen. (twice in Livy) or Acc. (twice in Plautus).

With either construction in place of an Abl. or a Nom. is sometimes found an Infinitive or Acc. and Infinitive, e. g. 560. The person who needs is in the Dative. Cf. 584, 666, 715-16, 1003.

domo me, sc. arcesse. Cf. 38 note.

ACT II. SCENE 3 [4].

Demipho consults his friends. They severally give opinions diametrically opposed to each other, leaving Demipho in greater uncertainty than before. The whole scene is pervaded by a delicate humour peculiarly Terentian.

442. hisce. The strengthening affix -ce is usually found with hic before words beginning with a vowel or h. The Nom. Fem. Plur. is haec.

With the enclitic -ne the forms are spelt hicine, haecine, hocine, etc. Iste is similarly strengthened into istic, istaec, istoc, or istuc.

443. in conspectum. Cf. 261.

446. siet. Cf. 313 note.

447. quid ago? 'what am I to do?' The Pres. Ind. was thus colloquially used instead of a deliberative Subj. In 812 a Pres. Ind. of this sort is directly co-ordinate with a Pres. Subj. Vergil's well-known phrase, A. 2. 322 quo res summa loco, Panthu? quam prendimus areem? is a probable instance of this usage, there being a dramatic propriety in admitting a forcible colloquialism in words uttered under such strong excitement. Cf. infra, 736-7, 1007. For a play on the two senses, the colloquial and the literal, see Pl. Most. 2. 1. 21. For a similar use in Greek, cf. Aesch. P. V. 767, 867, etc.

Cratinum censeo, 'I propose Cratinus.' Censere was the word used for moving a resolution in the Senate.

450. hic, 'in this case,' or simply 'here.'

451. restitui in integrum, 'should be null and void.' Cf. 405 note.

457. amplius. Ampliatio was the technical term for deferring judgment in a case when more time was needed to collect evidence; comperendinatio was the ordinary adjournment to the third day between the first and second part of a trial. Terence, however, was so strict in not making Roman allusions that the coincidence of the words may be accidental.

458. res magna est. On the Westminster stage an additional point is given to these words by the small stature of the Queen's Scholar to whom the part of Crito is by tradition assigned.

numquid nos vis? Cf. 151 note.

459. dudum, 'before.' Cf. 289 note.

459-460. negant redisse, sc. servi negant Antiphonem redisse.

462. percontatum. Supine after ibo. Cf. 102 note.

quoad. Cf. 148 note.

 46_4 . eccum = ecce eum. Terence uses eccum (common), eccam, eccos, eccas, ecca, also eccistam = ecce istam, and ellum, ellam = ecce illum, illam. Plautus employs also the fuller forms eccillum, eccillam, eccillud. In Terence eccum may stand by itself, e.g. Andr. 957 proviso quid agat Pamphilus: atque eccum, or followed by an Acc., e. g. 600 sed eccum ipsum, or with the person referred to following as a subject to a verb. e.g. Ad. 923 sed eccum Micio egreditur foras. Cf. 484.

in tempore, 'at the nick of time.'

ACT II. SCENE 4. [III. 1.]

Antipho returns, blaming himself for his faint-hearted flight. He is reassured by Geta that, thanks to Phaedria and Phormio, the interests of Phanium have not been betrayed.

465. cum istoc animo es vituperandus, 'you and your faint heart are much to blame.'

466, itane te hinc abisse. Cf. 153 note.

467. tete. Cf. 172 note.

468. consuleres, 'you should have thought for.' Cf. 200 note.

469. propter tuam fidem, either 'from her confidence in vou.' or 'from your assurances:' fides meaning either 'belief' or that which produces belief, i. e. 'promises,' 'oaths.'

poteretur. This form is preferred by Terence to potiretur, as also potitur: indeed potitur is only used once by a classical writer. Ov. Her. 14. 113. Terence constructs potior three times with an Acc.. once with an Abl., infra 830. Cf. Ad. 871, 876. The Augustan construction is the Abl., rarely the Gen. except in the phrase potiri rerum. 471. iam dudum. Cf. 289 note.

qui abieris, 'for your flight:' qui is causal.

474. subolet, lit. 'it emits a smell for one,' so 'one gets wind of,' 'has an inkling of:' used impersonally or with a neuter pronoun as subject; only in Plautus and Terence. Cf. Pl. Trin. 615, 698.

nil etiam, 'nothing at all:' etiam is often thus used as an intensive. Cf. 542.

475. nisi, 'only,' 'but.' Cf. 953. This usage seems to be only colloquial.

cessavit eniti, 'slackened his exertions:' cessare = 'to flag,' desinere = 'to desist.'

476. in, not repeated before aliis, as with cum 171.

praebuit, sc. se.

477. confutavit... senem, 'he utterly quenched the old gentleman when boiling over with rage:' confutare, lit. 'to pour cold water into a vessel which is boiling over.'

478. ego quod potui porro. In full the sentence would be, ego porro feci quod potui facere.

480. quid eum? 'what about him?' In conversational language an Acc. may be thus loosely used with no verb expressed and probably with none understood. One essential idea of the Acc. is 'limitation,' and so an Acc. may be thus employed to limit the question to the person or thing spoken about. Cf. 755.

aibat = aicbat. Terence seems to have used -ibam or -iebam for the Imperf. of the fourth conjugation indifferently, e.g. Andr. 38 servibas; Phor. 83 serviebat. The shorter form was sometimes employed by later poets, e.g. lenibat, nutribant, vestibat by Vergil; audibat, mollibat by Ovid. Aibam, etc., probably represents the colloquial pronunciation in the time of Terence. The MSS are so confused on this point that the reading has usually to be decided by the metre. Cf. 642.

481. The construction is a mixture of ut aibat, de eius consilio volo facere, and aibat de eius consilio sese velle facere. Cf. Ad. 648 ut opinor eas non nosse te.

de eius consilio, 'in accordance with his advice:' cf. the common phrases de more, de sententia.

482. metus, Gen. case. Some editors alter the MSS. reading to metuis, an archaic form of the Gen. found once in Heaut. 287 anuis.

484. eccum. Cf. 464 note.

ab sua palaestra. The term palaestra, 'wrestling school,' is here comically applied to the house where Pamphila lives, because Phaedria goes there so regularly. Tr. 'his special place of exercise.'

ACT II. SCENE 5. [III. 2.]

Phaedria begs Dorio, the owner of Pamphila, to give him three days' grace. Dorio is obdurate: he has an offer for the girl, and will not throw away ready money for tears and promises. 'First come, first served.' is his motto.

486. non audio, 'I won't.' Note the Present used colloquially to express intention, as frequently in English and Greek. Cf. 532, 669, 893, 963, 987, 1004.

quin. Cf. 209 note.

omitte me, 'let go of me.'

at enim. Cf. 113 note.

490. mirabar si... novi, 'I thought it would be a miracle if you had anything new to say to me;' cf. Andr. 175 mirabar hoc si sic abiret. The use of quicquam for quid implies Dorio's conviction that there was nothing new.

491. 'AN. I fear this fellow, lest he should— GE. be patching up some mischief for himself? That is just what I am afraid of.' Antipho was going to say, 'lest he should do some harm to Phaedria.' Geta, interrupting, substitutes significantly 'some mischief for himself, do you mean?' meaning to convey a strong hint to Dorio that he might drive the young men to take violent measures, as Aeschinus did with Sannio in the Adelphi. The words idem ego vereor are spoken at Dorio ironically.

suat, lit. 'patch' or 'sew,' whence sutor 'a tailor;' only here in metaphorical sense.

492. hariolare, 'you are talking nonsense.' The significant change in the meaning of this word, as also of vaticinari, shows into what disrepute soothsaying must have fallen before this date. Cf. μαίνομαι and μαντική, Plato Phaedr. 245 B C, Ad. 202.

493. faeneratum... dices, 'you will say that this kindness was richly repaid with interest.' Cf. Ad. 219 metuisti... ne non tibi istuc faeneraret? Both faeneror and faenero are found; Augustan writers prefer faeneror.

logi, Gr. λόγοι, 'mere tattle.' The purer Latin of Terence admits far fewer foreign words than we find in Plautus, and we never meet with actual Greek words, such as οἴχεται, παῦσαι, ἐπιθήκη, πάλιν, all of which occur in the Trinummus.

494. somnia, 'moonshine.' Cf. 874.

495. cantilenam eandem canis, 'you are singing the same old song,' or 'you are always harping on the same string.'

496. garri modo, 'chatter away;' modo strengthens the Imperative.

497. adeon . . . esse . . . te. Cf. 153 note.

500. ut phaleratis dictis etc. 'that you can lead me on with your 'tinsel and spangles," and lead home my girl for nothing.'

phaleratis, from phalerae, Gr. φάλαρα, horses' trappings, or decorations like medals worn by soldiers; so the adjective = 'ornamented,' 'fine.'

ducas. A similar sense of ducere is found, Andr. 180, 644.

For miseritum est, 'poor fellow.' The full phrase is found Pl. Trin. 430 me eius miseritum est. The tense here seems to be an imitation of the so-called 'immediate' Aorist in Greek. In English we should use the Present, 'I pity him.'

veris vincor, 'I can't gainsay the truth.'

quam uterque est similis sui, 'how true to his character each is,' i.e. 'How like Antipho! how like Phaedria!'

502-3. neque... malum! 'and to think of my being confronted with this trouble just when Antipho had been engrossed with a similar anxiety.' In this rendering neque alia is taken as = et non alia, following Stallbaum. That Antipho was so engrossed is seen from 506. Mr. R. C. Jebb (quoted by B. and W.) translates, 'And then to think that this blow shouldn't have befallen me when A. had some love trouble on hand too.' Wagner changes neque to adque; Zeune supposes vellem to be understood after neque; Paumier conjectures aeque for neque.

autem is often added like Gr. $\delta \dot{\eta}$ as an emphatic particle, especially in questions where some reproach is implied. Cf. 601, 775, 788.

504. quoi quod amas domi est, 'you who have at home the object of your love.'

505. Connect cum malo huius modi and translate, 'and have never experienced the shock of a trouble like this;' conflictaris = conflictaveris; cf. Andr. 93 nam qui cum ingeniis conflictatur cius modi.

506. auribus teneo lupum. A wolf is difficult to hold and dangerous to let go. Donatus quotes the Greek proverb, τῶν ἄτων ἔχω τὸν λύκον οὕτ ἔχειν οὕτ ἀφεῖναι δύναμαι. Cf. 'I've caught a Tartar.'

508. ipsum ... est, 'that is exactly my case with him.'

ne...sies, 'Oh! don't be a scoundrel by halves;' or possibly 'you are afraid of being a scoundrel by halves,' cf. Pl. Pers. 4. 6. 4, 313 note. In Augustan Prose ne with Pres. Subj. is only used in general prohibitions.

509. confecit, 'has he settled?'

511. ancillam, sc. vendere.

512. ut me maneat, 'to give me time.'

cum illo . . . fidem, 'to break faith with his customer.'

515. obtundes, sc. aures, 'will you keep dinning this into me?' obtundere aures, 'to beat at the ears,' comes to mean 'to importune,' or 'to annoy by constant repetition,' like the Hellenistic use of ὁπωπιάζειν, St. Luke 18. 5 (B. and W.). Cf. Andr. 348.

exoret sine: sino may be followed by a Subj. with or without ut, or by an Infin.; cf. 517.

516. 'He too will surely repay you twofold for any service you may have rendered.'

conduplicaverit. A Fut. Perf. is often used by Plautus and Terence to express a future action to be quickly and certainly performed, where in English we should employ a Fut. Simple. Cf. 681, 882, etc.

518. horunc = horum-ce, cf. 290.

519. neque ego neque tu, 'it won't be my doing nor yours either;'

i.e. it is Phaedria's fault for not paying over the money.

quod es dignus. In early Latin dignus is sometimes constructed with an Acc. neuter pronoun, cf. Plaut. Capt. 969 non me censes scire quid dignus siem?

duint. Cf. 123 note.

521. contra omnia hace. Some editors, believing that contra is not used as a preposition as early as Terence, put a stop after hace, understanding sunt. But though the adverbial use is much more common, contra is found as an undoubted preposition Pl. Ps. 155 adsistite omnes contra me, ib Pers. 1.1.13; and it is far more natural to take it as such here and in the parallel passage Ad. 44 ille contra hace omnia Ruri agere vitam.

522. da locum melioribus, said to have been a formula used by a

Consul's lictors in clearing the way.

524. quam ad, so all MSS. If the reading be correct, this is a rare instance of ad standing after its case. Bentley conjectures quoad. Tr. 'unless my memory deceives me, there was assuredly a date once fixed by which you were to pay him.' Cf. Cie. Nat. D. 2. 4 Senatus, quos ad soleret, referendum censuit.

factum. Cf. 315 note.

525. haec, sc. the date on which the other purchaser appeared.

526. vanitatis, 'bad faith.' The quality most prized by the Romans was gravitas, a solidity of character on which full reliance could be placed. Opposed to this was vanitas, 'fickleness,' 'untrustworthiness.'

placed. Opposed to this was vanitas, 'fickleness,' untrustworthiness.' dum ob rem, 'provided it pays.' In a similar sense we find in rem Andr. 546, and ex re 969, in an opposite sense ab re Pl. Trin. 238.

527. sic sum: etc. 'Tis my way. If you like it, deal with me.'

528. immo enimvero, 'nay, in very truth.'

532. dare se dixit = daturum se dixit. We find several instances in Terence where a Pres. Inf. is used instead of a Future Inf., e. g. Andr. 379, 411, 613, Ad. 203, infra 720, 837. Compare the use of the Pres. Ind., 486 note. The idea of intention implied in these cases makes the Pres. equivalent to a Future. So also in Plautus, e. g. Most. 3. 1. 99, ib. 5. 2. 21.

533. mea lege utar etc. 'I will follow my rule, "first come, first served."

ACT II. SCENE 6. [III. 3.]

Phaedria, in despair, implores the aid of Geta, who eventually undertakes by some means to procure the money in time.

535. The scansion is doubtful. It might be quoi minus | nihilo est | quod hic si | pote fu | isset | etc., or quoi mi | nus nihi | lo est quod hic | si pote | fuisset | etc. Wagner lengthens quod, making the third foot quod hic, but this is improbable.

hic si... exorarier, 'if only this three days' grace, could have been wheedled out of him.' In this passage si is not strictly conditional, but expresses a wish, exactly as in the corresponding English idiom.

pote. Cf. 379 note.

536. fuerat, Indicative because the promise was a fact, cf. 513.

537. dudum. Cf. 289 note.

dixti. Cf. 198 note.

adiuerit = adiuverit. The metre shows that adiuerit most nearly represents the pronunciation. Cf. Ennius, apud Cic. Senec. I. 1 adiuero.

538. quin. Cf. 209.

539. equidem, from quidem, compounded with the intensive particle e, as in ecastor, edefol, enim, and perhaps edurus. It does not stand for ego quidem, and, though more common with the first person singular, is also found with other persons and numbers: e.g. Eun. 956 atque equidem orante, ut ne hoc faceret, Thaide; Pl. Pers. 2. 2. 5 equidem si scis; Pl. Epid. 4. 2. 33 adulescentem equidem dicebant emisse; Sall. Cat. 52. 16 vanum equidem hoc consilium est.

540. id unde, sc. inveniam; cf. 38 note.

542. Note Hiatus after itane. See Introduction, p. 31.

etiam tu hine abis? 'out with you!' Cf. Eun. 799 non tu hine abis? Ad. 550 etiam taces? 'do be quiet.' This is better than to translate, 'What! are you too going to leave me in the lurch?' etiam is often thus used to emphasise questions or imperatives; cf. 474.

543-4. 'Can't I congratulate myself on not having got into trouble about your marriage, without your bidding me now jump out of the frying-pan into the fire for your cousin as well?' in malo quaerere crucem, lit. 'when in trouble already to seek for the gallows.'

546. parum. A final m in Latin was very lightly pronounced, so that parum practically = paru. Hence the elision of such syllables.

547. preci. Note that Nom. and Gen. Sing. of this word are nowhere found, Dat. and Acc. Sing. only in ante-Augustan writers, Cf. Andr. 601.

549. tum, used as a particle of transition, like the English 'then,' especially in questions, as in 541.

550. cedo. Cf. 197 note.

552. pedetemptim, not pedetentim, tempto not tento, etc. Tr. 'cautiously.'

553. quaere, 'think.'

554. faxit. Cf. 308 note.

quid plus minusve, 'something or other.'

555. verum enim, 'but indeed,' enim being a particle of emphasis; cf. 113 note. Note that verum enim is verum strengthened by enim, while enimvero is enim (= indeed) strengthened by vero, the former combination being adversative, the latter corroborative.

556. bona mala, an effective instance of Asyndeton, i.e. omission of et.

557. opus. Cf. 440 note.

argenti depends on quantum.

triginta minae = over £120; cf. 410 note. The price of accomplished female slaves in these comedies is usually from twenty to thirty minae.

558. percara. The prefix per- has an intensive force, e. g. pernimium, perscitus, perforciter, perliberalis, common in colloquial speech.

istaec . . . est. 'Indeed she is dirt cheap.' Cf. 442 note.

559. inventas reddam, more emphatic than inveniam. Terence is fond of this idiom, which is probably colloquial. Cf. 974, Andr. 683, etc.

O lepidum! sc. caput, a common phrase when some favour has been promised or granted: 'good fellow.'

aufer te hinc, 'off with you;' cf. 566 hinc modo te amove.

562, solus... amicus. Donatus quotes from Apollodorus μόνος φιλείν γὰρ τοὺς φίλους ἐπίσταται. ' He is the only friend that can be friend one.'

563. quod opera mea vobis opus sit, 'which I can do for you.' Here quod might be explained as an adverbial Acc., but the phrase is more probably an extension of the construction quid opus est facto? etc., quod being the subject, opera mea being added to complete the sense. Cf. 440 note.

564. illam, i. e. Phanium.

ACT III. SCENE 1. [IV. 1.]

Chremes has landed before this Act opens. He tells Demipho how he found the birds flown from Lemnos, and explains the cause of his deep concern at Antipho's unexpected marriage.

568. adduxtin tecum filiam. This clause is the antecedent to qua causa etc.

570-1. non manebat...meam neglegentiam, 'did not wait for my negligent delay:' i. e. the girl was growing older and older while Chremes still was absent.

familia, 'the household.' As slaves frequently constituted a large majority of a Roman household, familia was often used when the slaves were wholly or chiefly meant.

572. illi = illic. Cf. 91 note.

578. condicionem, 'match,' in the matrimonial serse.

580. sit. The subject is the young lady implied in condicio.

583. intercedet familiaritas, 'there shall be a good understanding between us.'

584. opus est scito. Cf. 440 note.

585. aliqua, sc. via, 'somehow.' Cf. 566, 746.

586. me excutiam, 'clear myself out.' Cf. Hor. Od. 3. 9. 19 si flava excutitur Chloe. Eun. 358 homo quatietur certe cum dono foras. Excutio me sometimes means 'I shake out my pockets' (sinus), to show that I have no stolen goods.

587. nam... meus, 'for I have nothing but myself to call my own,' implying, 'I am the only thing in my own house I dare call my own.'

58). neque defetiscar etc., 'and I will not slacken in my efforts until I have actually accomplished . . .'

usque adeo . . . donec. Cf. Andr. 662 orare usque adeo donec perpulit.

experirier. Cf. 92 note.

ACT III. SCENE 2. [IV. 2.]

Geta narrates with admiration the quickness of Phormio in understanding the new turn events had taken, and his readiness to co-operate in the scheme to get the required money.

591. hominem, added colloquially to neminem for emphasis: cf.

Ad. 259.

592. venio...ut dicerem. Cf. 117 note. 593. argentum opus esse. Cf. 440 note.

et id . . . fieret, 'and how it all happened.'

594. vixdum. Cf. 329 note.

intellexerat, 'he saw it all at a glance.' Note the force of the pluperfect.

595. quaerebat, 'he was asking for.'

596. tempus, 'opportunity.'

600. eccum ipsum. Cf. 464 note.

quis est ulterior, 'who is that behind?' Chremes is here standing behind Demipho.

attat. an interjection denoting apprehensive recognition of some danger, e. g. 963, Andr. 125 percussit ilico animum: attat hoc illud est.

601. sed quid pertimui autem belua? 'but yet why was I such a jackass as to be scared?' belua, 'a dolt,' 'an ass;' cf. Pl. Trin. 952.

autem. Cf. 503 note.

602. an quia = an pertimui quia.

603. duplici spe utier, 'to have two strings to my bow.' Cf. 92 note. Gr. ἐπὶ δυοῖν ἀγκύραιν ὁρμεῖν.

604. petam, 'I will try to get the money.' a primo, 'at first;'

cf. 642.

605. hunc hospitem, 'this new-comer.' Geta can use hinc and hunc with reference to Demipho and Chremes respectively, because he indicates to the audience by gesture the object of his remarks.

ACT III. SCENE 3. [IV. 3.]

Geta now puts his scheme into execution. He tells Demipho and Chremes that in their interest he has sounded Phormio, and has found him open to the following arrangement. On receipt of thirty minac the parasite will give up all legal proceedings and marry Phanium himself. To this Chremes scarcely persuades his brother by offering to provide the money from his wife's income.

607. expecto, 'I am waiting to see.'

610. volup est, 'I am delighted:' volup, an adverb, usually in the phrase volup est opposed to aegre est, from root VOL- whence voluplas, Volupia the goddess of pleasure, etc. The form volupe which appears in some MSS. is incorrect. In Terence only here and Hec. 857, fairly common in Plautus, never in Augustan writers. Cf. Gr. ἐλπίς.

credo. Cf. 255.

quid agitur? how goes it?' a common form of salutation, like quid fit?

611. 'There are many changes here, as is usual when one first comes home-very many.'

compluria, the older form of complura, which accounts for the Gen. complurium. Neither Plautus nor Terence use pluria, though Gellius mentions it as the original form.

614. circumiri, 'to be circumvented:' so also circumvenire; in English 'to get round a man.'

id . . . commodum, 'I was talking with him about that just now.' commodum, used in the comic writers as a temporal adverb, either enfortune, 'in the nick of time,' e. g. Pl. Trin. 400, or = modo, 'just now,' as here; only ante- and post-classical. Gr. ἀρτίως.

615. nam herele. Nam is thus joined to words of asseveration, not giving any logical confirmation of the preceding statement, but as a connective particle with what follows. In English 'and indeed.' Cf. 113 note, Ad. 190.

agitans, 'turning the matter over.'

618. qui Phormio? 'what Phormio?' Donaldson, Varr. p. 381, following Kritz, and apparently Madvig, § 88, obs. 1, maintain that quis and quid merely ask for the name, but qui and quod (interrogative) inquire respecting the kind, condition, or quality of the person or thing. The truth seems to be that in many cases the substantival use of quis and the adjectival use of qui are attended with this distinction of meaning, which naturally arises from the form of the sentence, e. g. Eun. 823-4 TH. Quis fuit igitur? PY. Iste Chaerea. TH. Qui Chaerea? But that this distinction is not inherent in the actual words quis and qui is clear from the fact that quis est Phormio? quid est remedium? would require the same answer as qui Phormio? quod remedium? and that Cicero uses qui before a consonant, quis before a vowel. In many cases where quis seems to be used adjectivally the irregularity is only apparent, e.g. And. 965 quis homo est? 'who is there?' is literally 'who is the man?' Verg. G. 2. 178 quis color, 'what is its distinguishing colour?' Cf. 990-1.

is qui istam—, sc. nobis obtrusit or some such words: istam =

Phanium. Translate, 'the man by whom that girl'-

620. prendo hominem solum, 'I button-hole the fellow.'

621-2. 'Why do you not see how we can settle this matter between us amicably rather than by strife:' videre ut may be followed by Ind., e.g. Verg. A. 6. 779, cf. 358 note. Here the Subj. is required by the idea of contingency.

sic, 1. e. as I am about to suggest.

623. liberalis, 'a gentleman.' Cf. 815.

fugitans litium, 'shy of law-suits.' When participles from transitive verbs are used as pure adjectives they can be constructed with an objective Genitive, e. g. negotii gerens, 'carrying on a business,' etc.; cf. Madv. § 289.

624. modo, 'just now,' when qualifying unus it usually stands second.

625. auctores . . . daret, 'advised him to turn the girl out of doors.'

628. iam id exploratum est, 'he has had good advice on that point.'

sudabis satis, 'you'll have a hot enough time of it.'

630. verum pono . . ., 'but granted that . . .'

at tandem tamen, 'yet after all.' For the pleonasm cf. 80 note.

631. non capitis etc., ''tis not a question of life or death.'

632. mollirier. Cf. 92 note, infra 640.

633-4. quid vis dari tibi in manum? 'what will you take in cash?' 'To pay cash' is repraesentare.

635. haec hine facessat, 'the girl should take herself off:' se is understood. The phrase is classical, but the fact that it is only used in sentences directly or indirectly imperatival points to its colloquial origin.

sies. Cf. 313 note.

636. satin illi di sunt propitii P 'is the fellow in his senses?' Madness was always regarded as a divine visitation.

638. ut est ille bonus vir, 'so good a man is he.'

commutabitis etc., a colloquial phrase='to have words about a thing.' ~

640. non potuit, impersonal; cf. 303 note.

642. insanibat, 'raved.' Cf. 480 note.

cedo. Cf. 197.

643. nimium quantum lubuit, 'he wanted a great deal too much;' cf. Gr. πλείστον ὅσον, θαυμαστὸν ὅσον. Similar phrases are mirum quantum, incredibile quantum. Bentley. followed by others, reads nimium quantum. CH. Quantum? dic. But there is no MSS authority for the change.

644. talentum magnum, 'a whole Attic talent.' There was a small Sicilian talent. Cf. 393 note. Pl. Most. 3. 1. 110, ib. 4. 2. 913.

immo malum herele! a double entendre: malum dare = 'to inflict punishment,' but Demipho is also referring to the preceding magnum, which he alters to malum, sc. dabo, 'a great talent! I'll give him a great thrashing.'

645. quod adeo, 'the very thing which.' Cf. 389 note.

quid si etc. This sentence is elliptical. The full sense would be, 'if he were to portion out an only daughter, what could he do more?'

locaret, sc. in matrimonium, or nuptum; cf. 752.

646. rettulit, so spelt in A. Cf 21, 723 notes.

647. non suscepisse, 'that he did not rear one.' The father formally acknowledged a new-born child and undertook to bring it up as his own by raising it from the ground, when it had been laid before him: tollere is also used in this sense, e.g. Andr. 219. Cf. 967, 1007.

648. ut ad pauca redeam, 'to cut a long story short.'

651. fuerat. The Pluperfect because referring to a time antecedent to that implied in volui. The English idiom does not admit of it. Tr. 'as was right and fair.'

653. Tr. 'that a poor girl is given in slavery, not wedlock, to a rich man.'

in servitutem is substituted for in matrimonium.

ad ditem, not diti, because there is an idea of sending to the rich man's house. The position of a wife depended materially upon her dowry. See the relations of Nausistrata to Chremes; Pl. Trin. 688-601, etc.

655. qui. Cf. 123 note.

657. accipio, 'I am getting.' Cf. 447 note.

660. Incertus sum. Cf. 943, Introduction, p. 29.

661. si animam debet, 'if he is over head and ears in debt:' Gr. καὶ αὐτὴν τὴν ψυχὴν ὀφείλει.

ager oppositus est pignori, 'some land has been mortgaged.'

663. oiei, an exclamation, cf. hui.

664. ne clama. This archaic construction is not common in Terence, and disappeared altogether in later Latin, except in the poets, or as an intentional archaism, e. g. Liv. 3. 2. Cf. 802.

repetito. All MSS give petito, but another syllable is necessary for the metre.

665. pluscula, 'a little extra;' plusculum as a sul stantive is classical. Note the diminutives aediculae, ancillula, pluscula.

667. pone sane, 'put down, if you please;' sane is often thus used with Imperatives in colloquial language.

668. sescentas, Gr. μυρίας, the word commonly used for an indefinitely large number, as in English 'a hundred' or 'a thousand.' Cf. Pl. Trin. 791 sescentae causae, Cic. Verr. 2. 1. 47 possum sescenta decreta troferre.

dĭcas. Cf. 127.

669. nil do, 'I won't give a farthing.' For the tense see 447 note. ut inrideat. Cf. 304 note.

670-1. The order is, tu modo fac ut filius (se. Antipho) ducat illam (se. Chremes' daughter) quam nos volumus.

673. eicitur, sc. Phanium.

674. quantum potest, 'as quickly as possible,' a common phrase, fieri being probably understood; potest is impersonal. Cf. 897.

face. Cf. 309 note.

675. illam, sc. Phanium, hanc, sc. quae sponsa est mihi, cf. 657.

676. illi, sc. my betrothed's relations, so illis in 677. 677. iam accipiat, 'let him have the money at once.'

repudium renuntiet, 'should inform them that the engagement is broken off;' refudium is the dissolution of the marriage contract by one of the parties to it, divortium is a separation by mutual consent.

Consequently repudium is often used, as here, of persons engaged but not married.

679. opportune adeo, 'most luckily;' cf. 389 note.

680. Lemni, Locative case. Terence also uses in Lemno 873, 1004.

681. dixero. Cf. 516 note.

ACT III. SCENE 4. [IV. 4.]

Antipho, who was entirely in the dark as to the scheme between Phormio and Geta, had overheard with amazement and dismay the arrangement by which he was to lose his beloved Phanium. As soon as the old gentlemen are gone he fiercely assails Geta, who has some difficulty in assuring him that the whole affair is only a temporary ruse to get the money, and that there is no real cause to fear the actual accomplishment of the projected marriage between Phanium and Phormio.

682. emunxi argento senes, 'I have cleaned the old gentlemen out of their money.' Cf. Gr. ἀπομύσσεσθαι, applied to a drivelling old man.

683. satin id est? etc. 'Is that all?' 'I really don't know: it was all my orders.' Geta purposely misapplies Antipho's question to the amount of money demanded. Literally satin id est? = 'are you satisfied with that?'

684. verbero, 'you scoundrel.' Cf. mastigia, Ad. 781.

685. ergo is often used as an emphasising particle, especially in questions and commands. 'What then do you mean?' Cf. 755 note, 882, 948, 984, 995. Liv. 9. 31. 16 itaque ergo.

687. ut, introducing a wish as in 711, 773.

688. malis exemplis, 'with condign punishments;' exemplum was specially used for a 'method of punishment.'

689. Here the MSS, read huic mandes quod quidem recte curatum velis, which cannot stand after si quid velis and is almost certainly a gloss from Ad. 372 huic mandes, si quid recte curatum velis. The reading in the text is found in the margin of E and F. Tr. 'Here's a pilot to take one out of smooth water on to a reef.'

690. utibile = utile, only here in Terence, found in Plantus, e.g.

Trin. 748, not Augustan.

692. cedo. Cf. 197 note.

694. non enim. Cf. 113 note.

696. in nervom. Cf. 325 note.

701. tandem, 'after all,' so used Lucr. 5. 137. An easier reading would be tamen, but no MS. gives it.

702. vocandi, 'for issuing invitations.'

705. monstra [monestra, fr. moneo]. Omens, termed generically auspicia, auguria, were divided by the Romans into five classes—

(1) ex caelo, e.g. thunder and lightning.

(2) ex avibus, which gave omens by their note (oscines), or by their flight (alites).

(3) ex tripudiis, i.e. from the feeding of the sacred chicken.

(4) ex quadrupedibus, only used for private divination.

(5) ex diris, i.e. any portentous event, not otherwise classified; such were called prodigia, portenta.

Tr. 'how many things have proved ominous to me since that event!'

postilla. Cf. 347 note.

706. introit scans as a dactyl, intrôit, the final syllable being first contracted, cf. 55, and then shortened by the Iambic Law. See Introduction, p. 27. A black dog or cat has usually been considered 'uncanny.' Mephistopheles appears to Faust as a black poodle.

707. inpluvium, also 'confluvium', 'the skylight,' a quadrangular opening in the roof of a Roman atrium, through which smoke went out and rain came in; also sometimes the square basin sunk in the floor which received the rain. The second foot must be scanned as a proceleusmatic, per inpluvi | um. To avoid this many editors point in for per.

708. gallina cecinit, 'a hen crowed.' sc. like a cock. This was an omen, according to Donatus, that the wife would survive the husband.

708-9. hariolus, haruspex, synonymous terms for a soothsayer who interpreted omens from the entrails of victims (Sans $hir\hat{a}=$ entrails). The art soon fell into disrepute among the educated classes, cf. 492 note. Note that the whole system of omens at Rome had a practical bearing. The signs warned men to do or not to do some act, and so the auspices were taken or soothsayers consulted before any undertaking of importance in public or private life. Cf. Hor. Od. 3. 27. 1-7—aliquid is only found as a correction in E, Eugraphius reading quid. Otherwise the MSS. read autem, which is in itself awkward and leaves negoti without a construction. Many editors place a colon after vetuit and assume the loss of two half-verses between incipere and quae. But of this there is no trace in the MSS. or the Scholiasts, and it seems the least of the difficulties to read aliquid.

711. me vide, 'look to me,' 'trust to me.' Cf. Andr. 350, Pl. Trin.

ACT III. SCENE 5. [IV. 5.]

The old gentlemen re-appear with the money for Phormio. Chremes is manifestly apprehensive of some trickery, but Demipho is confident that no one will get the better of him. Chremes is also anxious that Nausistrata should be sent to break the news to Phanium, and his brother somewhat impatiently assents.

713. ne quid verborum duit, 'that he practise no trickery on us;' verba dare='to cheat.'

duit. Cf. 123 note.

714. hoc . . . a me, 'I will never rashly part with it,' i.e. the money.

715. commemorabo, 'I will formally recite,' i.e. before the witnesses.

716. opus facto est. Cf. 440 note.

lubido, 'caprice.'

717. si... instabit, 'if that other girl (cf. 657) puts more pressure on him.'

719. ut conveniat hane, 'to visit her,' i. e. Phanium. This is the classical construction of convenire in the above sense.

720. The order is dicat nos dare eam nuptum (Supine) Phormioni. For dare cf. 532 note.

721. familiarior, 'more intimately connected.' Cf. 851.

723. malum, 'the plague;' thus used interjectionally, cf. Ad. 544 quid hoc, malum, infelicitatis? infra 948 and 976 where there is a relative clause appended.

quid tua id refert? 'what does it matter to you?' The comic poets prefer refert to interest; Cicero much prefers interest. Augustan writers construct refert with ad and Acc. more often than with Gen.

724. te is here used in a general sense, like 'you' in English. Cf Ad. 30 etc.

725. quoque is an almost certain interpolation, as shown by the metre.

726. mulier . . . convenit, 'one woman gets on better with another.'

727. illas, sc. his wife and daughter from Lemnos, cf. 571-2.

ACT III. SCENE 6. [V. 1.]

Chremes is startled by the sudden appearance of Sophrona, a servant of his Lemnian wife, from Demipho's house. He learns from her the death of her mistress and the marriage of Phanium to Antipho. At first he fails to identify his own daughter with Phormio's ward, and thinks that his nephew like himself must have married two wives: but the confusion is soon removed and his joy is unbounded.

730. suasum, 'advice,' only ante- and post-classical.

732. nam quae = quaenam, 'why? who?'

a fratre, 'from my brother's house:' a common idiom, e. g. 795, etc. 733. infirmas, 'insecure,' because divorce was so easy, and parental authority so great, that no marriage could be safely depended on without the father's consent.

735. edepol, 'by Pollux,' shorter form pol 747. The prefix is from the interjection e, as in e-castor, and perhaps a syncopated vocative of deus.

736. quid ago? Cf. 447 note, and 737.

737. adeo...maneo... cognosco, 'am I to approach,' etc. Note that this use of the Pres. Ind. for Pres. Subj. is usually in animated speech, making the effect more vivid. Cf. 447 note.

741. istorsum (isto vorsum), 'that way.' Chremes is now standing between Sophrona and the house.

742. appellassis, usually considered as syncopated from appellaveris, as excessis And. 790, from excesseris; cf. Zumpt, § 161. But Madv. § 115 f. and Roby § § 291-3 consider both these forms, like faxo, ausim, etc., to be remnants of an archaic Future in -so (Ind.), -sim (Subj.), while King and Cookson, pp. 462-3, hold amasso, amassim, etc., to be conjunctive and optative forms of the sigmatic aorist. In Plautus found an Inf. in -asscre, e.g. impetrassere. Cf. 308 note. It may be noted that here the Perf. Subj. would be the tense naturally expected. Livy uses adclarassis, 1. 18.

743. st! 'hist.' This exclamation scans as a long syllable.

744. conclusam, the word applied to a wild beast in a cage. Tr. 'I have a ferocious wife caged up there.'

745. perperam, 'falsely,' used by Cicero; Gr. πέρπερος.

746. effutiretis, 'should blurt it out;' connected with futilis, fundo.
porro, 'afterwards,' 'later on.' The more remote in a succession of events seems the essential idea. Cf. 923, 937, 1025.

aliqua. Cf. 585 note.

747. istoc, 'on that account,' like eo.

751. quae essem, 'since I was,' quae causal. male factum! 'what a pity!' a very cool expression of grief.

752. nuptum locavi. Cf. 645, 720.

753. dominus, in the absence of Demipho his son was 'master.'

Note Hiatus after Hem! as after Au! in 754, 803.

754. Au! a female exclamation, usually of deprecation, e.g. 803: Gr. lov. The text, following Bentley, omits habet after uxores, metri gratia. Some editors omit is or obsecro.

The consternation of Chremes at finding that his nephew had, as it seemed, so early copied his uncle's bigamy, is very humorous.

For ellipse of the verbs here and in 755 see 38 note.

755. quid illam alteram, 'what about that other one?'

haec ergo est, 'this is the very girl.' Cf. 685 note.

756. composito factum est, 'it was done by arrangement.' amans, 'her lover,' here a pure substantive.

757. di vostram fidem, 'good heavens.' Acc. of exclamation, cf. 351 note.

758. offendi, 'I have accidentally found,' lit. 'stumbled on.'

759. 'That she has been wedded to the man I wished, and is loved as I wished.' Chremes is speaking to himself, and so there is no ambiguity in omitting gnatam, which some editors substitute for amari the reading of A.

761. haec sola, sc. Sophrona. The reading is doubtful. If hic solus be right, Antipho must be meant.

762. quid opus facto sit. Cf. 440 note.

763. oppido. Cf. 317.

765. seibit. Terence uses scibo for 1st pers., scies for 2nd pers.

(except in Heant. 996 and perhaps Eun. 805), scibit for 3rd pers.

The MSS. read sequere me: cetera intus (or intus cetera) audies, which will not scan. The insertion of tu seems more satisfactory than to change audies to audiemus or audietis. The line then becomes an Octonarius, as the last line of Ad. 4. 5 (712), which also follows Septenarii.

ACT IV. SCENE 1. [V. 2.]

Demipho returns from paying the money to Phormio in a very bad temper, which is not improved by Geta's expression of doubt as to the fulfilment of the compact. Geta himself is by no means easy with regard to his own prospects of escaping punishment.

766. nostrapte. Cf. 172.

ut malos expediat esse, 'that it pays to be a rogue;' cf. Heaut.

388 expedit bonas esse vobis.

767. dici nos bonos studemus. Note that in Augustan Latin a predicative word following an Infin. and referring to a subject in the Nom. is itself in the Nom., e.g. Bibulus studet fieri consul. Cf. Ad.

504, Madv. § 393.

768. ita fugias, ne praeter casam, sc. fugias, 'in running away, don't pass the house' (i.e. your master's); a proverb applicable to a runaway slave, something like 'don't jump out of the frying-pan into the fire,' or 'don't go farther and fare worse.' Demipho means that in trying to get out of one trouble he is running the risk of a worse. Casa, properly a 'hut,' 'cottage,' might be easily applied in slaves' slang to the master's house, 'the diggings.' Another interpretation is, 'in running away, don't pass your house,' which is the safest place for you. But the application of this to Demipho's present circumstances is not obvious. Mr. Stock renders 'More haste, less speed.'

nonne. Cf. 119 note.

769. etiam argentum est ultro obiectum, 'we have actually thrown money to him as well,' i.e. like a sop to Cerberus. Cf. Verg. A. 6. 420-1 melle soporatam et medicatis frugibus offam obicit. For ultro cf. 360 note.

770. qui. Cf. 123 note.

771. qui recta prava faciunt, 'who confound right with wrong.'

illi = illic, 'in that affair.' Cf. 91 note.

773. modo ut etc. 'I only hope that we may be able to get out of it by this plan of his marrying her:' discedi, cf. 1047, Andr. 148: possiet, impersonal; for the archaic form see 313 note. The marriage of Phormio with Phanium is of course meant. For ut introducing a wish see 687, 711.

774. haud scio... an mutet animum, 'I really don't know whether he won't change his mind.' The English idiom requires a negative in the second clause, because haud scio an suggests 'probably,' but 'I don't know whether' suggests 'probably not.'

ut homo est, 'being human;' a thoroughly Terentian touch.

ut, 'seeing that.'

775. mutet autem?' 'what? change?' Cf. 503 note.

777. ista, i. e. Phanio; hanc, i. e. Nausistratam.

778. de iurgio siletur, 'not a word about the quarrel.'

779. haec, sc. Phanium.

780. in eodem luto haesitas, 'you are sticking in the same mire.'

vorsuram solves, 'you will have to pay compound interest 'vorsuram facere='to borrow from one man to pay another.' Geta means that he has got the money for Phaedria at the expense of a new complication about Phanium, for which he will have to pay the penalty.

781. in diem abiit, 'is put off for the moment.' Cf. in diem vivere.

plagae crescunt, 'my score of stripes is running up.' 783. eius, sc. Nausistrata, see stage direction.

ACT IV. SCENE 2. [V. 3.]

Demipho re-appears from his brother's house escorting Nausistrata, who has consented to inform Phanium of the proposed arrangements. Nausistrata is eloquent on the feebleness of Chremes as compared with her father.

784. age dum. Cf. 504 note.

786. re dudum, 'just now with your money.' Cf. 681, and for dudum 280 note,

787. factum volo, 'you are very welcome,' lit. 'I wish it done.' Distinguish factum volo, 'I am glad it is so;' factum velim, 'I hope it may be so;' factum vellem, 'I wish it were so.' So too factum nolo, etc.

788. quid autem? 'why, what do you mean?' Cf. 503 note.

790. statim, 'regularly,' only ante-classical in this case.

The subject of capiebat is Nausistrata's father.

vir viro quid praestat! 'what a difference there is in men!'

791. 'Yes, two talents, and that when prices were much lower.'

792. quid haee videntur? scilicet. This question and answer are obscure. The meaning may be, (1) 'What do you think of this?' 'Of course you are right:' or (2) 'What! do you think so?' (referring to Demipho's hui! of admiration). 'Of course I do.' Hence Colman's translation, 'What! are you surprised?' 'Prodigiously.' In any case Demipho's scilicet is not likely to be either ironical or absent, as supposed by some, since he is very anxious to pay Nausistrata every attention.

natum, the reading of A_2 is more characteristic of Nausistrata than natam.

793. parce sodes, 'please spare yourself.' Cf. 103 note.

794. cum illa, sc. conloqui. Demipho expected a scene.

795. abs te. Cf. 732 note.

ACT IV. SCENE 3. [V. 3.]

As Demipho and Nausistrata approach the house, Chremes comes out in great excitement from an interview with his daughter. He wants of course to stop any further proceedings with reference to Phanium, but finding Nausistrata with Demipho he cannot explain matters. Demipho gets impatient and Nausistrata suspicious at his inexplicable conduct and manifest agitation, and only with great difficulty does Chremes get his wife safely back into her own house, so that he can impart to his brother the news which he has been bursting to tell.

796. nollem datum. Cf. 787 note.

797. paene, sc. dixi. Cf. 440 note.

798. iam recte, 'it's all right.' Cf. 812.

quid tu? introduces a new point like quid? cf. 64 note, and quid ais? cf. 100 note.

istac = Phanium; hanc = Nausistrata.

799. qui, 'how?' Cf. 123 note.

800. 'est cordi,' 'is dear to,' a common phrase.

nostra, sc. refert. Cf. 940.

801. sie erit, 'so it will prove:' an idiomatic form of confident asseveration which may refer to the past, e. g. Heaut. 1014 subditum se suspicatur. CH. Subditum, ain tu? SO. Sic erit, the present as here, and of course the future, e. g. Ad. 182.

803. Au! with Hiatus, as in 754.

ne nega. Cf. 664.

804. aliud dictum est, 'was wrongly given.'

hoc tu errasti, 'it was this which misled you:' hoc Acc. Cf.

Andr. 498 tenco quid erret.

806. miror quid siet, 'I wonder what it's all about.' Nausistrata has been observing with growing suspicion her husband's manifest perturbation and his anxiety to stop any conversation on the subject. Cf. 313 note.

807. ita . . . ut, thus used in strong asseverations, literally, 'may Jupiter so preserve me according as Cf. Roby 715 f.

809. aut scire aut nescire hoc, 'know the truth or falsehood of this matter.' That Nausistrata should be present at any enquiry of the sort is of course what Chremes most dreads.

811. vin satis . . . essa? 'do you wish me to ask no further questions about it?'

quid. Cf. 798 note.

illa filia, Abl., cf. 137 note. Demipho, in the presence of Nausistrata, thus alludes to Chremes' Lemnian daughter.

812. hanc igitur mittimus? 'Then are we to drop her?' i.e. give up our plan of marrying her to Antipho. For the mood see 447 note: here mittimus is co-ordinate with maneat.

813. quid ni? 'certainly.' illa, i. e. Phanium.

814. in omnis, 'for all parties.'

815. perliberalis, 'very lady-like.' Cf. 558 note.

817. di nos respiciunt, 'it is quite providential.' Cf. 854.

818. potuit, 'was it possible.' Cf. 303 note.

ACT IV. SCENE 4. [V. 4.]

In a short soliloquy Antipho contrasts his cousin's happiness, secured by thirty minae, and his own wretchedness, from which there seems no escape.

820. ut....habent, 'considering the state of my own affairs.'

fratri, sc. patrueli, a cousin on his father's side: cf. use of ἀδελφός. 821. scitum, 'sensible.' Cf. 110 note.

822. sient, Subjunctive, because the statement is general and indefinite.

mederi usually governs a dative, and this may merely be a case of Inverse Attraction. See, however, Verg. A. 7. 756 sed non Dardaniae medicari cuspidis ictum Evaluit, contrasted with ib. G. 2. 135, Ter. Andr. 831, 944.

S23. simul = simul ac. Cf. Liv. 4. 5, etc.

825. si hoc celetur, Subjunctive, because he does not think it will remain secret. Cf. Andr. 568-9.

sin patefit. Indicative, because he believes it will be revealed. Note that when facio is compounded with prepositions it modifies the vowel of the stem and forms its Passive regularly, e. g. inficior; when connected with other parts of speech the a is not modified and the Passive is in fio, such not being regarded as true compounds.

827. habendae, 'of keeping,' like Gr. έχειν. Cf. 880.

ACT IV. SCENE 5. [V. 5.]

Phormio enters, congratulating himself on the successful result of his plans for Phaedria. He now intends to leave town in order to enjoy a few days' quiet drinking.

830. propria ut poteretur, 'should gain her as his own,' i. e. should make her his wife, which could not have been done had she remained a slave. For poteretur cf. 469.

Phaedriā. The final a in Greck names is usually long in Terence, except in dissyllables, e.g. Getă.

emissa est manu, 'she has been freed.'

831-2. otium ab senibus, 'some peace from the old gentlemen.' aliquot hos sumam dies, 'I will take these next few days,' sc. as a holiday.

833. quid ais? quid? 'what now? what do you mean?'

835. partis tuas. Cf. 215-17.

836. suas, sc. partes. Cf. 266-6.

rursum, 'in return' (re-vorsum).

837. ire. Cf. 532 note.

Sunium, the southern promontory of Attica. There was in the deme a prosperous town, owing to the silver mines of Laurium, a strong fort built during the Peloponnesian war, and a celebrated temple of Athena overlooking the sea.

838. emptum, Supine.

dudum, 'just now,' cf. 665.

839. conficere, 'that I am making short work of.'

840. ostium concrepuit. Folding doors were in general use among the Greeks and Romans, hence the pl. fores, valvae. These seem to have opened either outwards or inwards, and so it was customary for a person leaving a house to rattle or knock the door as a warning to those without. This noise is usually described as in the text. The door is said crepare, or concrepare, Gr. ψοφεῦν. Hence some have thought (see Ramsay, Mostellaria 2. 2. 23-5) that crepare merely refers to the creaking of the hinges, but Ad. 788, and Most. 2. 2. 74-5, seem decidedly against this view. A person knocking (usually) from without is said, pellere, pulsare, pultare, less commonly percutere, Gr. κόπτειν, κρούειν, ἀράσσειν. Tr. 'there's a noise at your door.'

abs te, 'at your house.' Cf. 188, 732 notes.

ACT IV. SCENE 6. [V. 6.]

Geta suddenly issues from the house of Demipho in great excitement. By some adroit cavesdropping he has learnt the secret about Chremes' Lemnian daughter and her identity with Phanium. All this he relates to Phormio and Phaedria.

841. O Fortuna, O Fors Fortuna, 'O luck! O great good luck!' Fors Fortuna, the goddess of good luck, had a separate temple on the right bank of the Tiber distinct from that of Fortuna: the verbs therefore are plural. The Asyndeton is natural in such excited speech.

842. meo ero, Dat. commodi.

843. quidnam hie sibi volt? 'whatever does the fellow mean?' a colloquial phrase frequent in Terence. The ordinary meaning of velle aliquid alicui is 'to want' or 'to wish something for some one.' Cf. 946.

844. mihi cesso, 'I am wasting my time,' lit. 'I am loitering to my own injury.'

umerum. Cf. 39 note.

pallio. Slaves out of doors sometimes wore a coarse outer garment, the lower fold of which would be thrown over the shoulder when they wanted to make haste.

§45. contigerint. We should have expected ut quae contigerint sciat, or ut have quae contigerunt sciat. The Subjunctive may perhaps depend on the idea of the character of the news to be imparted rather than the mere fact.

847. em tibi! 'there you are again!' Cf. 52 note.

848. It seems to have been a common practical joke to delay slaves when in a burry, in order to get them into trouble. It is a stock incident in Terentian comedy. Cf. 195, Ad. 321 etc.

849. pergit hercle, 'he's going on, by Jove.'

numquam tu odio tuo me vinces, 'you will never get the better of me with all your annoyance.' odium = importunate insolence, cf. Hor. Sat. 1. 7. 6, Hec. 123, 154.

850. vapula, 'go and be hanged,' lit. 'beaten,' a colloquial phrase.

verbero. Cf. 684.

851. familiariorem, 'one of the family.' Cf. 721.

852. actutum, 'immediately,' common in Plautus, but occurs only once in Cicero and once in Livy.

853. For scansion of O see 259 note, Introduction, p. 31.

quantum est qui vivont. Cf. the common phrase quicquid est deorum. Tr. 'the happiest man alive.'

homo hominum, thus doubled for the sake of emphasis.

854. ab dis solus diligere. Cf. Andr. 973 solus est quem diligant di. 855. qui, 'how?' 'why?' Cf. 123 note, 878.

856. satin est? 'is it not enough?' Cf. 119 note.

delibutum gaudio, 'over head and ears in joy:' lit. 'smeared over.' Cf. Cic. Rosc. Amer. § 135.

enicas. Cf. 384.

857. cedo. Cf. 197 note.

858. tu quoque aderas? 'Oh! you here too?' a colloquial use of the Imperfect, 'expressing surprise at the present discovery of a fact already existing.' Allen and Greenough, Lat. Gr. § 277 d. Cf. 945, Hor. Od. 1. 27. 19 quanta laborabas Charybdi.

accipe, em! 'listen, here goes!'

859. recta, sc. via.

862. gynaeceum, Gr. γυναικείον. The women's apartments were at the back of the house, beyond the $α\dot{\nu}\lambda\dot{\eta}$ or central hall.

863. pone, 'behind,' rare in Augustan Latin. Cf. Verg. A. 2. 725 pone subit conjux.

864. eram, sc. Phanium.

865. Sophrona. Cf. 830 note.

867. suspenso gradu, 'on tip-toe.'

869. eaptans, 'trying to catch.' Cf. Ov. Met. 10. 41-2 Flebant exsangues animae: ... nec Tantalus undam Captavit refugam.

871. mirificissumum. In Augustan Latin adjectives in -ficus, -dicus, -volus are compared -entior, -entissimus.

873. clanculum, 'secretly:' a diminutive from clam. Note the unusual distance of cum from its noun matre.

874. somnium. Cf. 494.

utin haec ignoraret. Cf. 304 note.

877. inaudivi, 'I have chanced to hear.' This seems to be the regular sense of inaudire.

etiam dabo, 'I will tell you something more.' For this colloquial use of dare see Heaut. 10, Verg. E. 1. 18, Ov. Fast. 6. 434, Cic. Acad. 1. 3. 10: cf. reddere 320 perhaps, Hor. Sat. 2. 8. 80, Verg. A. 2. 323.

880, adhibendae. Cf. 827.

882. quin ergo. Cf. 200, 685 notes.

fecero, 'no sooner said than done.' Cf. 516.

883. bene factum gaudeo, 'I am delighted that all has gone well.'

ACT IV. SCENE 7. [V. 7.]

In the short soliloquy which closes the Act, Phormio prepares the audience for a new development of the plot. Armed with Geta's information, he sees his way to secure Phaedria from all trouble of returning the thirty minae, and himself from fulfilling the compact whereby the money was obtained.

884. datam, sc. esse. Cf. 153 note.

885-6. eludendi . . . adimere. Note the change of construction. For adimere after occasio cf. Andr. 56 studium alere.

888-9. 'For this same money will have been given to Phaedria as grudgingly as it was given (to me).' Phormio says, the old men will be no better pleased when they learn the real destination of the money; but he can force their hand, and compel them to let Phaedria keep it.

hoc qui cogam, re ipsa repperi, 'I have discovered means to screw this out of them from the course events have taken.' cogere can take a double Acc. of the person forced, and of the thing extorted: cf. Ad. 490.

891. angiportum hoe proxumum, 'this alley hard by.' Both angiportus, mas. of the fourth decl. and angiportum, neut. of the second decl.
were in use. The term was applied to those passages leading off the streets through a doorway, common in most old towns. Sometimes such a passage was a thoroughfare, sometimes a 'cul de sac.'

893. non eo. Cf. 447 note.

ACT V. SCENE 1 [8].

On the reappearance of Chremes and Demipho from their interview with Phanium, Phormio puts his new scheme into execution. He comes to fulfil his engagement like a 'man of honour.' Demipho makes very lame excuses to annul the compact and demand back the thirty minae. The parasite affects righteous indignation. He has already paid away the money, and broken off his betrothal in order to marry Phanium. If now this is not to be, the dowry at least must remain with him as satisfaction for the false position in which their indecision has placed him. Demipho waxes very angry and threatens summary justice; whereupon Phormio discloses his knowledge of the Lemnian intrigue. Chremes is utterly crushed. His brother urges him to make a clean breast of the affair to Nausistrata, and promises his mediation. Stung almost to frenzy by Phormio's taunts, Demipho tries to drag him off to the law-court. The parasite on his side attempts to get to the door of Chremes' house. There ensues a violent struggle, ended by the appearance of Nausistrata, who has heard the stentorian shouts of Phormio.

894. gratias habeo atque ago. The regular usage was to say gratiam habeo, but gratias ago.

896. This line is found in the MSS. after 905, where it is almost certainly misplaced by a copyist's error.

oppido. Cf. 317.

897. quantum potest. Cf. 674.

898. dilapidat, 'pitches away,' sc. like stones, 'makes ducks and drakes of it:' not found elsewhere in any classical writer.

903. recepissem, 'I had undertaken.'

semel, 'once' = 'at some former time,' thus used by Augustan authors, especially after si, cum, etc.

905. ut mi esset fides, 'to preserve my honour.'

906. idque adeo. Cf. 389.

908. ita uti par fuit, 'as was fitting.'

912. potuit, sc. dari.

913. eam nunc extrudi, so A, four later MSS reading nunc viduam extrudi.

915. inluditis me. Terence constructs inludere thrice with the direct Acc., once with in and Acc., Eun. 942, once with in and Abl., And. 758. Cicero uses both the direct Acc., in with Acc., and also the Dat., which last construction is found also in Vergil and Tacitus. Its meaning is 'to make game of' or 'to spoil wantonly;' the sense 'to sport with,' given in L. and S. Dict. for illudo chartis, Hor. Sat. 1. 4. 139 is doubtful.

917. contempserim, lit. 'seeing that I have jilted her.'

918. amittere. Cf. 141 note.

922. rescribi, 'to be re-transferred.' Both at Athens and Rome the business of banking and money-changing was carried on in the marketplace by men called in Greek τραπεζίται, in Latin argentarii.

923. Quodne ego discripsi porro . . . 'what? the money which I paid away again?' Note that the question is asked by ne, not by quod, which is not here interrogative. Cp. Pl. Tr. 358. Sometimes -ne is appended to an interrogative pronoun, when it emphasises the question, e.g. Hor. Sat. 2. 2. 107, ib. 2. 3. 295. Some critics consider this -ne as an affirmative particle, see Palmer on Pl. Am. 697.

925. sin est ut velis, periphrastic for sin velis; compare the use of fore ut.

928. alterae, archaic for alteri. Pronouns forming the Gen. and Dat. in -ius and -i are occasionally declined by Terence like a regular adjective in -us -a -um, e.g. Andr. 608 nulli = nullius, Eun. 1004 mihi solae. Nulli consili is also read Cic. Rosc. Com. 16, § 48.

929. dabat, 'was offering,' Gr. ἐδίδου.

030. i hine in malam rem = i in malam crucem, 368 note. For scansion cf. 259 note, but the reading here is doubtful.

magnificentia, 'rodomontade.'

931. fugitive, 'vagabond,' lit. 'runaway slave.' Gr. δραπέτηs.

932. adeo goes with ignorarier. 'Do you suppose that even now we know so little of you and your proceedings?'

933. ut filius etc. epexegetical of hoc etc.

937. si porro esse odiosi pergitis, 'if you continue to be trouble-some.' For porro, here and 923, cf. 746 note.

940. dotatis, a hit at Chremes, whose wife was well dotata.

quid id nostra, sc. refert? Cf. 800.

942. nullus sum. Cf. 179.

943. educat. Terence more often uses educere in this sense. sepultus sum, 'I'm dead and buried.' Ct. 1026.

944. haec adeo, 'these very things.' Cf. 389 note.

illi. Phormio intentionally leaves the person unnamed. Of course he means Nausistrata.

945. eras. Cf. 858.

946. missum te facimus, 'we dismiss you.' Cf. 394 5 note.

quid vis tibi? Cf. 843.

947. condonamus te. $\acute{Cf}.$ 151 note. The Augustan construction is the Dative of the person.

948. malum! 'the plague!' Cf. 723 note.

ergo. Cf. 685 note.

949. puerili sententia, 'your childish decisions:' sententia is here used in its proper sense as an 'expression of a determination.' Fleckeisen's conjecture inconstantia is quite gratuitous, as that meaning is given by puerili.

950, vŏlō: vŏlŏ. Cf. 123 note.

953. nisi . . . scio, 'I only know.' Cf. 475 note, Andr. 664.

954. monstri . . . simile, 'it is like a judgment.' Cf. 705.

inieei serupulum, lit. 'a small pointed stone,' hence 'doubt,' 'anxiety,' 'difficulty.' Cf. 1019, Andr. 228, etc. A neuter form scrupulum or scripulum is used as the smallest division of weight, $\frac{1}{24}$ of an ounce. Tr. 'I have made them uneasy.'

955. hicine ut . . . auferat. Cf. 304 note.

957. praesens, 'resolute,' a classical usage. Compare the English phrase 'presence of mind.'

959. The order is neque iam te posse celare id uxorem tuam; as usual celare takes a double Accusative.

961. placabilius est, 'it is the better way to appease her.' Cf. 226 note. 962. nostro modo, 'as we please.'

963. Note the Hiatus at the change of speakers, cf. 146.

attat. Cf. 600 note.

haereo. For the tense cf. 447 note: cf. 780.

964. hi gladiatorio animo ... viam, 'they are planning an onset upon me in the spirit of desperadoes.' The metaphor in gladiatorio is of Roman origin. Terence very rarely makes an allusion so distinctly national. Cf. p. 16. The combats of gladiators were proverbially ferocious.

966. vos, i.e. Chremes and his wife.

967. quom, causal with Indic., cf. 23 note.

e medio excessit, 'has departed this life.' Cf. 16, 1019 notes. suscepta est. Cf. 647 note.

969. ex re istius, 'to your brother's advantage.' Cf. 526 note, Hor. Sat. 2. 6. 78.

istius may be dissyllable of Synizesis, or the last syllable may be shortened.

970. ain tu? 'what do you mean, Sir?' A formula often used to express surprise, reproof, etc. peregre. Cf. 243 note.

971. neque sis veritus, 'and have had no respect for:' vercor in this sense with a Gen. is rare, but is once found in Cicero's letters.

972. novo, 'unheard of;' as often. ēi. Cf. 1030.

973. lautum, Supine, 'to wash away.'

974. incensam dabo. Cf. 559 note. For dabo cf. 877, 1027.

975. ut ne. Cf. 168 note.

lacrumis si extillaveris, 'even if you melt away in tears.'

976. malum! Cf. 723. Note malum used interjectionally, yet acting as antecedent to quod. duint. Cf. 123 note. The line is identical with Pl. Most. 655.

977. adfectum esse. Cf. 153 note.

978. asportarier, so used 551. Under the Empire deportare became a technical term implying transportation for life, usually to a small island, with loss of citizenship: while relegare was to banish beyond a certain distance from Rome for a stated period and with no deminutio capitis. Tr. 'to think that such a rascal is not sent a voyage at the public expense.'

981. hue, sc. eamus.

983. enim nequeo, 'I really can't.' Cf. 113 note.

iniuria, 'action for assault.' Cf. 329.

984. ergo. Cf. 685 note.

985. rape hunc, 'drag him away.'

sic agitis? 'is that your plan?'

987. valet. Cf. 358 note.

non taces? 'won't you hold your tongue?' Cf. 447 note.

989. est ubi, Gr. ἔστιν ὅτε, 'sometime.'

ACT V. SCENE 2 [9].

With insolent triumph Phormio discloses to the outraged wife her husband's infamy. Demipho tries to intercede for his wretched brother, at first with small success. Phormio improves the occasion. He wins from Nausistrata a practical assurance that Phaedria shall be allowed to keep his bride, that the money paid shall not be asked for, and last, but not least, an invitation for himself to supper, to which they all go in as the curtain falls ¹.

¹ In Roman theatres the curtain was lowered (aulaea premere) to the floor, or perhaps drawn under the stage at the commencement of an

990. qui nominat me—? Nausistrata begins to speak while she is scarcely out of the door. Before she has time to finish her sentence (with homo perhaps), her eyes fall on the termination of the violent struggle before the house, and she breaks off with an exclamation of surprise. This explains qui, which otherwise would have been quis. Cf. 618 note.

991. quis hic homo est? 'who is this fellow here?' Cf. 618 note.

992. hicine ut . . . respondeat. Cf. 304 note.

993. creduas. All MSS. give credus; but the archaic form seems necessary for the metre. Plautus uses creduam, creduas, creduat: also creduis, creduit.

994. abi. Cf. 59 note.

totus friget, 'all as cold as a stone,' i.e. with fright. Cf. Pl. Most. 4. 2. 1 totus gaudeo.

998. quod. Cf. 155 note.

1001. tibi narret? 'is he to tell the tale for you?'

1005. mi homo! 'my good man!'

1009. hodie, 'in our time.'

1012. haccine. Cf. 58 note.

1014. The order is non nego eum meritum esse culpam in hac re.

1015. sed ea quin sit ignoscenda? 'but why should that be unpardonable?' quin = 'why not,' cf. 209. Donatus, followed by Bentley, considered the phrase as an Aposiopesis, negare non poteris or the like being understood. Others repeat non nego before quin, sc. sed non nego quin ea sit ignoscenda, which does not seem very forcible.

verba fiunt mortuo: a doubtful phrase, (1) 'you are wasting words on the dead;' or, 'you might as well talk to the dead,' sc. as to Nausistrata: cf. Pl. Bacch. 519 nihilo plus referet Quam si ad sepul-chrum mortuo dixit logos.

(2) 'his funeral oration is being pronounced,' a sarcastic allusion to Demipho's feeble excuses for Chremes, which are represented as the laudatio usually delivered at a funeral, perhaps here suggested by sepultus sum 943, cf. 1026.

1016. tua . . . tuo, objective use.

1019. e medio abiit, 'has departed.' Cf. 16, 967 notes.

scrupulus. Cf. 954 note.

1021. quid ego aequo animo, sc. feram? 'how can I bear it calmly?'

Act, and raised again at the conclusion (aulaea tollere). Cf. Hor. Ep. 2. 1. 189 quattuor aut plures aulaea premuntur in horas, Verg. G. 3. 2 purpurea intexti tollant aulaea Britanni.

cupio . . . defungier, 'I wish, wretched woman that I am, that this were now the end.'

defungier probably impersonal, as in Ad. 507 utinam hic sit modo defunctum. The translation, 'I should like to die at once in my misery,' seems to agree neither with the following words nor with Ad. 507.

1022. quid sperem? 'what can I hope for?' Fleckeisen's conjecture, qui id sperem, 'how can I hope for it,' is very plausible.

1024. magis expetenda, 'more attractive.'

1026. exequias Chremeti . . . ire, a formula used in giving notice of a funeral. Note the omission of the preposition before exequias.

1027. sie dabo, 'that's my style,' or 'such shall be my revenge.' dare = facere is common in colloquial Latin, in Lucretius and Vergil, less frequent in Cicero and Livy. We find such phrases as dare finem, cuneum, motus, ruinas, discessum, impetum, etc.=facere finem, etc. Munro on Lucr. 4. 41 quotes Max Müller. Science of Language, 2nd series, p. 224. 'in Latin it was equally impossible to distinguish between the roots dâ and dhâ, because the Romans had no aspirated dentals; but such was the good sense of the Romans that, when they felt they could not efficiently keep the two roots apart, they kept only one, dare, to give. and replaced the other dare, to place or to make, by different verbs such as ponere, facere.'

It seems possible that such uses of dare as are given above may be survivals in popular or poetical language of dare from root dhâ. Cf. 974, etc.

1028. faxo. Cf. 308 note. Two MSS. read faxo tali sit mactatus. mactatum, 'victimised.' For the various senses of mactare see maetatum, 'victimised,' For the various senses of mactare see Lewis and Short. With this reading note $h\bar{t}c$; cf. 266 note.

1030. habet ... ogganniat, 'she has something to din (lit. snarl) into his ears as long as he lives.' Note eī.

1031. at meo merito, sc. hoc videtur factum. Cf. 1033. At first sight it looks as if this repetition of the same phrase (1031 and 1033) were due to some corruption of the text: but in the mouth of the outraged Nausistrata it is perhaps natural enough.

1033. minume gentium! 'not the least in the world!' gentium is a partitive Genitive, cf. nusquam gentium, ποῦ γῆs, etc.

1034. fleri infectum non potest, 'cannot be made unmade;' this infectum is a compound of in and factum, to be distinguished from infectus, Perf. Part. Pass. of inficio, 'I stain,' 'corrupt.'

1035. purgat, 'he apologises.'

1037. Nausistratā like Sophronā, Phaedriā, cf. 830 note.

prius quam is thus used with a Pres. Indic. when the event or act referred to is regarded as certain, otherwise with a Subj., e. g. Ad. 583 prius quam ad portam venias.

1049. summus, sc. amicus, 'most devoted to.'

1030. at emphasises the affirmation.

quod potero, 'as far as I possibly can.'

ecastor, according to Gellius, was used exclusively by women, herele by men. Either sex employed pol. Cf. 735 note.

1052. quod here and in 1053 is a Cognate Acc. Cf. 259.

1053. me ad cenam voca. By a professional parasite this would doubtless be interpreted as a standing invitation.

1055. iudex noster. Cf. 1045. faxo aderit. Cf. 308 note.

Cantor. A Roman Comedy was divided into spoken dialogue in Iambic Senarii diverbia and the passages in any other metre which were delivered to a musical accompaniment (cantica). The term Canticum was also used in a more restricted sense to denote a lyrical monologue, of which Plautus has numerous examples, Terence only three, and those very short, Andr. 481-5, ib. 625-638, Ad. 610-6.

We learn from Livy 7. 2 that, in order to save his voice. Livius Andronicus placed a boy on the stage to sing the words of cantica, while Livius himself acted the part in dumb show. This practice was adopted by others, and it seems from Hor. A. P. 155 donec Cantor 'vos plaudite' dicat that the usual request for applause was uttered by this singer, who

It is, however, possible that 'Cantor' in Hor. A. P. nierely means 'actor,' as Cicero pro Sest. 55. 118 uses cantores as equivalent to histriones.

In all Terence's plays the MSS, mark the speaker of plaudite by ω . Bentley thought this to be a corruption of CA. (for Cantor, but, as the actors are often indicated by letters of the Greek alphabet in the order of their appearance, it is more probable that ω was appropriated to the speaker of the last words.
